GILLNETTER HUNTED WITH SEVEN ABOARD

ALERT BAY (CP)—Search vessels scanned stormy Queen Charlotte Strait today for a gillnetter missing for four days with four adults and three children aboard. The 30-footer, Lady Sharon, left here late Saturday on a 2½-hour trip to the Village Island Indian Reserve. Aboard were: Matthew Puglas and his wife, Lucy, and Matthew, Jr., nine, and Barbara, four, and Lily Charley and her son, Tommy, 12, and Andy Williams.

PLEASE DROP THE 'MAC' THIS ONCE—'PHERSON'

EDINBURGH (AP)—Thousands of Scots have been asked to drop the "Mac" or "Mc" from their names—just for once. They shouldn't mind—it means money for them. They are among 6,000,000 pensioners in Scotland due for a pension increase next month. To collect, they must send their pension books to the local ministry of pensions office for adjustment in alphabetical order. When the pension was increased once before, officials got so bogged down in the Ms that they have appealed to the Macs and Mcs to respond according to the second part of their names. Like Pherison, Tavish or Kenzie.

Wrong-Way Driver Killed on Thruway

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mrs. Barbara Ann Hale, about 30, was killed Tuesday night when the car she was driving in the wrong direction on the nearby Deas Island Thruway was in head-on collision with another automobile. The woman's former husband, Jack Hale, was a passenger in the car, police said. He is reported in satisfactory condition in hospital suffering undetermined head injuries. Driver of the second vehicle, Michael Joseph Moran, suffered shock and bruises but did not require hospital treatment, police said. Police said they were at a loss to understand how Mrs. Hale came to be driving north on the south-bound section of the thruway.

U.S. Contends Bomarc Still Best for Canada

By HAROLD MORRISON
WASHINGTON (CP)—A state department spokesman said today the United States considers the Bomarc anti-aircraft missile system the best available weapon for its purpose and presumes Canada will complete plans to acquire U.S. nuclear warheads for the two Canadian Bomarc squadrons. The spokesman denied a report circulating in the U.S. and Canada saying the U.S. is disposed to allow Canada to back out of the Bomarc deal gracefully. The report, published by the New York Herald Tribune, quoted unnamed Washington officials as saying alternative means of joint defence can be worked out. The department later issued a statement saying "there has been no discussion of this sort either within the U.S. government or between the two governments." The spokesman said there is no change in the status of the Bomarc and no approaches have been made by Canadian authorities—representing either the existing or the incoming government—to have the Bomarc system replaced by some other form of defence. "The Bomarc weapon is the best available for its purpose," the spokesman said. It is the U.S. government's hope, he added, that Canada-U.S. negotiations to provide U.S. nuclear warheads for the Bomarc and Canadian jet interceptors can be completed as soon as possible. However, it is understood from other quarters that should a government headed by Liberal Leader Pearson insist on the Bomarc being withdrawn from Canada, the U.S. would give this request serious consideration and probably comply, providing a proposal for an alternative means of defence can be worked out.

Mike Takes Over Monday; John D. Formally Resigns To Carry On In Opposition

By ALEX YOUNG
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Canada's new Liberal government will take office at 12 noon on Monday. That is when Prime Minister Diefenbaker's resignation, formally submitted to Governor-General Vanier today, becomes effective.

After a 20-minute session with the governor-general today, Mr. Diefenbaker, stepping up to cameras, microphones and reporters with a smile, stated: "I saw His Excellency the Governor-General. I informed him as to the results of the election. I gave him my resignation effective Monday next at the hour of 12 o'clock noon. "He will proceed in the regular constitutional manner to provide an opportunity for my successor to take office."

In answer to reporters' questions, Mr. Diefenbaker also made clear that he intends to "carry on" as leader of the Official Conservative Opposition, and set his sights towards again becoming prime minister. "I intend to carry on," he said, when asked about his future plans. "I will be available as the leader of the opposition. It will be an interesting session. I look forward with interest to the session."

He said he believes he is the eighth of Canada's 13 prime ministers who, having occupied that office, served as opposition leader afterwards. "While you can never tell the future, two of them—I believe Macdonald and King—became prime minister again. "I intend to endeavor to follow their example."

Just one hour after Mr. Diefenbaker left Government House the man who will succeed him as prime minister, Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson, received a call to visit the Governor-General at 3:30 p.m. (EST) today.

Mr. Pearson, whose party won 130 seats to the Conservatives' 94 seats in the April 8 general election, was at lunch when he received the message from Government House. It was expected that Governor-General Vanier would ask Mr. Pearson if he was able to form a government. Then, next Monday at noon, Mr. Pearson would assemble with his chosen cabinet ministers at Government House to be sworn into office.

Meanwhile the Liberal leader told reporters he hopes to summon the new Parliament into session Thursday, May 16. This is the same date he frequently mentioned during the election campaign. Members of Mr. Pearson's cabinet are not expected to be announced until they take office Monday.

Mr. Pearson said the Monday changeover time was set by Mr. Diefenbaker. "I would have preferred Thursday or Friday," he said, but added that Monday was "all right with me."

Mr. Pearson said his cabinet choices are "practically complete" and if need be he could have taken office within 24 hours.

Mr. Diefenbaker arrived at Government House today for his noon appointment with the ailing Governor-General at 11:58. He stepped from his car, with aide B. T. Richardson, smiled for photographers, doffed his hat, said "good morning," waved away the microphones of radio reporters, and entered Rideau Hall.

Mr. Diefenbaker wore a black morning coat and grey striped trousers. The prime minister met with Governor-General Vanier in a second floor bedroom of Government House, where the Governor-General is recuperating from a mild heart attack he suffered on April 8. The Governor-General, according to aides, was attired in pyjamas and robe as he received the prime minister. The Governor-General has been instructed by his medical advisors that he may carry out his official duties from his sick bed, and may receive visitors, but that he must not make any public appearances for six weeks.

Mr. Diefenbaker was escorted to and from the vice-regal bedroom by the Governor-General's secretary, Esmond Butler, and by the Governor-General's aide-in-waiting, Continued on Page 30

RED DEER (CP)—Social Credit leader Robert Thompson says his party will support a Liberal federal government "without any specific demands or conditions attached."

OTTAWA (CP)—The Social Credit party caucus announced today that all Quebec members who earlier declared their support for a Liberal government have repudiated their statements and stand united with their Social Credit colleagues.

The statement, prepared by the Quebec wing of the caucus meeting here and approved by Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson in Edmonton, said a telegram has been sent to Governor-General Vanier by Gerard Perron (Beauce), Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford) and Raymond Langlois (Megantic) withdrawing their earlier commitment to support prime minister designate Lester B. Pearson.

Originally, six Quebec Social Credit MPs elected sent a sworn statement to Gen. Vanier declaring they would support the Liberal party in the new Parliament. The three others—Pierre-Andre Boutin (Dorchester), Lucien Plourde (Quebec West) and Robert Beaulieu (Quebec East)—renounced the statement earlier.

Today's caucus statement, following lengthy meetings here Tuesday and in Edmonton, said the incident now is closed and that the party is united. "The analysis of this vote shows that the Social Credit party has made impressive

OTTAWA (CP)—Key recommendations in the fourth report of the Glassco royal commission on government organization: Reorganization of CBC management to set clear-cut lines of authority, attain a higher degree of efficiency and develop positive goals.

Higher salaries—for senior CBC officials.

More aggressive CBC policies in advertising sales, particularly the sale of cultural programs to prestige advertisers.

Integration by the defence department of many services common to the navy, army and air force but now being handled separately by each, such as supply and construction.

Replacement of servicemen by civilians in non-combatant defence department jobs, wherever possible, to save probably $20,000,000 a year.

Increased executive powers for the deputy defence minister and the chairman of the chiefs of staff committee.

More bilingualism among external affairs officers, of whom many now speak only English.

Increased hiring of women university graduates for external affairs work.

More local administration by northern affairs officers in the north in place of central control from Ottawa.

Establishment of a "high command" to co-ordinate defence engineering, wiping out duplication of effort.

WILL LIVE IN BRITAIN

Leading Soviet Pianist Defects

By ANTHONY WHITE

LONDON (AP)—Vladimir Ashkenazy, the Soviet Union's leading young concert pianist, and his wife were hiding somewhere in England today after announcing they had left Russia indefinitely to live in Britain.

The 25-year-old pianist insisted he was not seeking political asylum, saying "I am a Russian and I love my country." But the impression here was that he had defected, as Leningrad ballet star Rudolf Nureyev did in Paris in 1961.

Ashkenazy came to Britain on a concert tour last month and brought his wife and year-old son, Vladimir. He said the Soviet government had given him permission for an indefinite stay but he "turned to British authorities because we did not know when the Russian permission allowing us to stay in England might be revoked."

The home office said Ashkenazy's wife, Dodie, a native of Iceland, was a resident of Britain for 17 years before she married and had asked to be allowed to take up residence in Britain again. A home office spokesman said this was granted and, in accordance with normal custom, the same privilege was extended to her husband. The spokesman emphasized that political asylum was not involved.

Mrs. Ashkenazy told a correspondent of the Icelandic newspaper Morgunbladit she had "never liked Russia, Russian habits or their way of life."

"I have hoped from the beginning to be able to leave Russia and take my husband and child to England," she said.

Mrs. Ashkenazy said she is expecting another child. Her father, Johann Trygvason, is an orchestra conductor who lives in London.

The pianist and his family were reported travelling incognito in northern England. Ashkenazy's pre-eminence among the young Soviet pianists was underlined last year when the Soviet government picked him to enter the second Tchaikovsky competition. The first Tchaikovsky prize was won in 1958 by an American, Van Cliburn, and the Russians wanted a Russian to get it. Ashkenazy divided the first prize with John Ogdon, a Briton.

ROUND-A-BOUT

By DOUGLAS HILLSIDE

A seemingly rare occurrence took place at City Hall Tuesday as two civic organizations meshed gears to AVOID digging up a newly-paved street.

Greater Victoria water board agreed to budget $20,000 for relining of a leaky 24-inch main under Hillside Avenue before the street is repaved this fall by the city works department.

Board members were told that if the relining was not done, inevitably leaks would continue and the new paving would have to be torn up periodically.

The relining of cement would provide about 20 years of trouble-free operation of the water main.

Readers of The Times' sign at Oak Bay junction were baffled yesterday when they saw this cryptic message:

HAIL TO THE O'BRIEN
BIRD THOU NEVER WERT

Since there was no related story in last night's Times, many subscribers called, demanding an explanation.

It was all an involved form of greeting to Andy O'Brien, sports editor of Weekend, who arrived in Victoria to do a feature on Archie McKinnon, dean of Canadian coaches. The second line is a favorite quote of O'Brien's, a poetry-lover who spouts reams of Shelley at the slightest provocation.

The 10-year-old son of a former Victoria newspaperman has felt the sting of discrimination because he is a Canadian in Washington, D.C.

Bill Galt, now Washington correspondent for the Vancouver Sun writes that his son was denied admittance to a Cub pack "because Cub Scouts is an all-American organization and you're an all-Canadian family."

Cub Scouts are the U.S. offshoot of the international Wolf Cub-Boy Scout movement founded in England by the late Lord Robert Baden-Powell.

Mr. Galt says, "This domestic crisis in Canadian-American relations has been partly eased by diplomatic negotiations, conducted by my wife. As a result, the pack has agreed to study the case."

A Bay Street philosopher suggests to Round-a-bout that if the police really want to prevent impaired driving they should watch beer parlors and cocktail bars at closing time. That's when the tipplers toddle toward their cars. They could be given a choice of taxiing home or being charged as soon as they start their cars.

He suggests also that liquor stores desist from selling to those already "afloat."

And he says, if the corner grocery could sell beer, more of the total drinking would be done at home—and the corner grocer, struggling daily against heavier odds from the large chains, would have a new lease on life.

A perfect cribbage hand of 29 points was scored the other evening by 11-year-old Christopher Elford, 3045 Larkdowne, while he was playing with his brother Alan against his aunt, Mrs. M. O. Mayhew and grandfather, J. H. Elford. But even with the perfect hand, the boys still managed to lose the game.

British Columbians are to decide the name of a new, $1,040,000 livestock show building at the Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver.

Prize for the winning name is $300.

The 50,000-square-foot structure has a dome-shaped roof which its designers claim is the lightest steel and membrane roof of its size in the world.

It was primarily designed for agricultural shows but will operate all the year round as a multi-purpose show building. There are 3,200 permanent theatre-type seats.

Anyone in B.C. may submit a name for the building up to May 31.

First copies of James Audain's new book My Borrowed Life will hit the bookstands Friday, publisher Gray Campbell said today.

Publication is expected to meet with some reaction, as its pages are chock full of names ranging from socialites to tradesmen, from Victoria to London, the Continent and beyond.

It is Campbell's fourth publication in the 11 months since he organized Gray's Publishing Ltd., Sidney, and the first hard cover.

First two books went to 3,000 copies, and the third effort, a surprising little collection of poems All About Babies, not intended as a money-maker, has run to 1,000 copies.

The advance order for Borrowed Life is 300 of the first press run of 2,000 copies. Vancouver Public Library has bought eight and a little shop at Sidney is filling its window with 25 first editions.

'Hall of Studies' For Nuns Rejected

A religious order's zoning application to permit the erection of a seminary for student nuns in the Queenswood residential area was rejected by Saanich council Tuesday.

Council turned down the application of the Sisters of St. Ann who requested permission to build a "hall of studies" on the former 15-acre Kilgour estate at the corner of Arbutus Road and Queenswood Drive.

The building would have provided quarters for nuns studying at Victoria College.

RATEPAYERS AGAINST
The application was opposed by the Cadboro Bay Ratepayers' Association which is seeking to preserve the area, including Ten Mile Point and Cadboro Bay, for single family dwellings.

The association is already involved in a battle with council to prevent the erection of a high-rise apartment on Haro Road.

Louis Lindholm, legal advisor for the association, urged council to honor the

New Honor Bestowed On Vanier

OTTAWA (CP) — Governor-General Vanier has been appointed a member of the Privy Council, it was announced today.

The appointment was formally approved Feb. 29 and made public in an extra edition of the Canada Gazette today.

As a member of the U.K. Privy Council, Gen. Vanier is entitled to use the prefix Rt-Hon. with his name.

single-family zone in the Queenswood area.

He said more than 1,000 persons have signed a petition requesting no changes to the single family zoning bylaw.

OTHERS TO FOLLOW

"We ask you to respect the wishes of the majority," he said. "If this building is permitted in the Queenswood area, others are sure to follow."

Temper were thin when C. N. Montague, speaking in support of the application, hinted that religious discrimination was one of the reasons for the strong opposition against the seminary.

"I take strong objection to that," said one ratepayer. "I always donate towards any cause of the Sisters of St. Ann."

There were cries of "here, here" from the audience.

NOT INVOLVED

Mr. Lindholm assured the Sisters that religion or race was not involved in the issue.

"The residents in the area are opposed to any changes to their single family zoning bylaw," he said. "They are asking council to retain the area strictly as a residential district."

Reeve Stanley Murphy, who voted against the application, said residents were not yet ready or prepared for any changes to the zoning bylaw.

"I'm not opposed to the house of studies," he said. "But the people are not prepared for a change yet."

CHANGE THINKING

He predicted that when large scale development takes place on the Victoria College Gordon Head campus, residents in the surrounding area would "think differently."

"I say when that takes place, residents will come to us to change the zoning bylaw," he said. "But for the present they do not want a change in land use."

'Big Steel' Firms Join Price Hikes

By JACK LEFLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Rushing steel price rises spread today to Bethlehem Steel Company and National Steel Corporation, second, and fifth-ranking concerns in the United States.

They became the ninth and 10th companies to announce increases on selected products. The list included the industry's seven largest producers, and accounted for more than three-fourths of the U.S. production in 1962.

Despite some variations, the Bethlehem and National mark-ups held to the general pattern set previously, corresponding closely with those posted Tuesday by U.S. Steel Corporation, the No. 1 steelmaker in the U.S.

The Bethlehem increase, confined to three big-tonnage items, added $4 a ton to the price of hot-rolled sheets and strip, $5 on cold-rolled sheets and $7 on galvanized sheets.

In addition to "big steel," Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation, Armco Steel Corporation and Inland Steel Company joined the parade Tuesday.

DECLINED LAST YEAR

Armco and Inland declined a year ago to join in across-the-board increases which collapsed.

Some industry sources gave the raises a good chance of sticking, in contrast to the effort a year ago, which fell apart under pressure from President Kennedy and failure of a solid front to develop. (See Bell Column, Page 6)

KENNEDY SILENT

As company after company announced boosts, Kennedy remained silent.

After Wheeling broke the price line, the president indicated that selective increases would be acceptable but cautioned the industry and the Steelworkers Union against action that would lead to a general increase.

U.S. Steel's price rises were the lowest of those announced so far, averaging $4.85 a ton.

U.S. Steel and the companies which joined it in raising prices Tuesday cited five rises in labor costs since 1958, when the last general steel price increase came.

Companies raising prices have said that the increases applied to less than half of sales. U.S. Steel put its figure at 29 per cent.

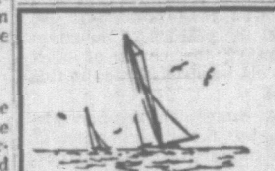

Items affected were mainly those in strong demand as steel buying boomed.

'Didn't Know' Builder Paid Church Labor

By FRANK RUTTER

Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi Tuesday said he did not know that a contractor on a government project paid for work on his Kamloops church.

However, he told the highway graft inquiry that he had made personal pleas from his pulpit for volunteer labor.

Previous evidence at the inquiry disclosed that two carpenters were paid $4,000 for work on the church by Bonanza Construction, which was also meeting the payroll on Project 819 in 1957 and 1958.

The money was sent to Mr. Gagliardi's brother, Anthony, the church construction foreman, at the minister's Kamloops home.

"The arrangement was not made with me, nor did I know the arrangement had been made," the minister told the inquiry.

'Sponsor' Had Own Arrangement

It was because Bonanza, the "sponsor" of the workmen this time, had its own arrangement with the Workmen's Compensation Board for their coverage.

Normally sponsors did not have such an arrangement, so they paid the church, which passed on the money to Anthony Gagliardi, who did have an agreement with the board.

The highways minister also denied the allegation of Montana contractor Dick Holzworth that contractors on Project 819 paid the Calvary Temple organist $350 a month.

Mr. Gagliardi said no organist had ever been paid anything by any contractor.

"I feel very bad today hearing that the church and all these things have to be dragged into the public forum," Mr. Gagliardi said.

He said he had resigned as

'You Are a Liar,' Says Dowding

Mr. Dowding first presented the allegations of Mr. Holzworth in an affidavit filed in the legislature Feb. 26.

Mr. Gagliardi said Mr. Dowding, a lawyer, told him in the corridor then that he was "acting" for Mr. Holzworth. The contractor is suing former colleagues for money he says he lost on Project 819.

"You are a liar—that's a dreadful thing to say," cried Mr. Dowding, an observer at the inquiry.

Mr. Gagliardi said he could take him to the exact spot where he said it.

"I never talked to him about it," Mr. Dowding said.

Mr. Dowding retracted "liar" and Mr. Gagliardi accepted his denial as well.

Contact Man Allegation Denied

The minister, in answer to his lawyer, Angelo Branca, said that he never promised the contractor any other job, and he found that, contrary to an earlier allegation, no equipment had been rented as a result of promises either.

Mr. Gagliardi also denied another Holzworth charge—that Mr. Lymburner was a contact man who "kept the doors greased" between contractors and the minister.

Mr. Gagliardi said other contractors have visited him far more often than Mr. Lymburner.

The two carpenters who worked on the church were Larry Jontz and Dominick Donatelli.

"It was completely above-board—no one was trying to hide anything," he said.

He said what a contractor did with his own money was

'Question Of Honor' Says Killer

PARIS (Reuters)—Police said today Mansour Amiali, a 38-year-old secretary - interpreter in King Saud's royal party, told them he shot and killed the Saudi Arabian king's cousin because the prince "humiliated him" in the company of a woman friend.

Prince Abdul Aziz bin Saud ben Djelal, 37, died in hospital after being shot twice in the back and six times after falling to the floor of a fashionable Paris hotel bar.

They said he told them the prince banged on his hotel door Monday evening while he was receiving a woman friend and demanded his services for an urgent task.

Malali said "It was a question of honor" and "I had been insulted."

'YOU NEED GUIDANCE ... BADLY'

Lawyer Lloyd G. McKenzie Tuesday raised the temperature when he emphatically stated that MLAs on the highway graft inquiry needed "guidance" in reaching a verdict.

It happened when the MLAs were arguing if Mr. McKenzie should give them a summation.

Victoria Soerel J. Donald Smith said he should. Opposition Leader Robert Strachan said Mr. McKenzie should not set himself up as a judge of the inquiry.

"Believe me I am not going to do that," Mr. McKenzie replied.

"I certainly think—with the very greatest respect—that you need guidance ... and you need it badly."

Mr. Strachan objected "most vehemently". He called it an "arrogant statement".

"I mean it," Mr. McKenzie retorted.

The inquiry decided to wait until today to make a decision on hearing Mr. McKenzie.

Democratic Socialism Plan Set by New Arab Union

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt, Syria and Iraq have pledged to form a new United Arab Republic based economically on Arab socialism and politically on western parliamentary institutions.

Announced aims are to wipe out feudalism, capitalism, reaction and imperialism; and to "liberate" Palestine, where the Jewish state of Israel has been established.

A communique signed early today by President Nasser and 30 others from the three countries indicated the new federal union of 38,000,000 people will be at least two years taking shape.

A plebiscite will be held by Sept. 17 to approve a still unwritten constitution and elect a president, expected to be Nasser. Then a 20-month transitional period is planned during which the president will rule with the help of the three revolutionary councils now in power.

The communique, issued after 10 days of negotiations, said the union will have a two-house legislature. One will be chosen according to population. In the other, each state will have equal representation.

The legislature will be chosen during the 20-month changeover period. Elections will be by secret ballot, and women will have the vote.

PLEDGE FREE SPEECH
The communique also promised guarantees of freedom of speech, press and religion much more liberal than those currently enjoyed in the three countries. Although freedom of religion was promised, Islam will be the state religion.

The new state, the communique said, will exclude "private exploiting capitalism and its violent whims which are pushed by the motive of selfish profit."

"This does not necessarily mean the nationalization of all means of production nor the abolition of private property."

Political parties are to be welded into a single "political front," apparently similar to the one party system Nasser has created in Egypt. But the communique said the unified state will "take into consideration regional circumstances."

This indicated some special role for the Ba'ath Socialist party which is dominant in the Syrian and Iraqi revolutionary regimes.

Local affairs are to be left to the individual states, which are to have separate constitutions, presidents and legislatures. The federal constitution will be paramount.

The Bluff Is Called

NOT UNTIL THIS WEEK, SO far as we remember, has the leader of any Canadian political party suggested that some of his elected followers may have been bribed. That suggestion now comes from Mr. Thompson, the titular but not the real leader of the Social Credit Party.

He has heard, he says, that certain members of Parliament in Quebec were offered large remuneration if they would support the Liberal government. Six of them have publicly promised to support it. The inference of Mr. Thompson's remark is obvious.

It is also grave in the extreme. Mr. Thompson's veiled charge should not go unanswered. If he has any proof he should produce it. No doubt he shall soon hear, perhaps before this is printed, what the accused Quebec Social Crediters have to say in their own defence.

This extraordinary incident, whatever the truth of it may be, reveals at once the sorry state of Social Credit in national politics, as briefly disguised during the recent election campaign. The disguise is now removed.

In the provincial politics of British Columbia and Alberta Social Credit is still powerful. As a national force it has never possessed more than nuisance value. And lately that force has fallen under the control of Mr. Real Caouette, who treats Mr. Thompson with little more than contempt, saying that only he himself speaks for Quebec.

The feud between these gentlemen can be of little significance to the nation when a new government at Ottawa is taking control of national policy and has its hands full of practical business. But a clear lesson has been offered the Social Credit governments of British Columbia and Alberta.

They should have realized by this time, after so many vain assaults on federal politics, that their party is purely a provincial phenomenon. Its theories cannot be successfully transferred to Ottawa. Its pretence of national importance has been disproved. Its election claims have been discredited. Its bluff has been called.

Messrs. Bennett and Manning, both wise and able politicians, must understand at last that they have a place and function in the local field of government but nowhere else. The best service they can give the nation is to withdraw altogether from federal politics, mind their own business and leave the business of the nation to those responsible for it.

Failure Can Be Costly Too

ALTHOUGH THE WORK OF the United Nations in the Congo and the Middle East is progressing quietly at this time, there has been no diminution in the critical financial state that is developing in the world peace organization.

It is estimated that by the middle of this year, the UN will be more than $200 millions in debt, as a result of refusal of some member nations to pay their assessments. The direct cause of this deficit is the Congo and Suez operations. Soviet bloc nations refuse to pay for the former, and several other countries — France, Belgium and South Africa — are also in arrears. The Arab countries are among those who do not support the Suez peace-keeping operation.

While the general work of the UN as a world organization no doubt can continue—arrears in regular UN dues are not extreme—the special expeditions which have been organized as emergency measures may suffer. This could have serious effects on world peace.

The Gaza Strip police force, in which Canada plays a prominent part, has long had an uneventful task. But whether this situation would continue if the force were removed, remains to be seen. The Congo work is now reaching a point where success can be seen, but there remains much work to be done in guiding the new state onto its proper course and ensuring that the peace now reigning there shall not be disrupted. Removal of the UN forces and advisers could be disastrous.

Yet without adequate financing the UN cannot function in these danger areas. It is short-sighted policy on the part of the delinquent nations to withhold their financial support. Any small war these days could quickly become a large one, and the nations which refuse to support the UN's peace programs might well become the first victims.

But there is a further consideration. The two UN operations still being carried out are themselves pilot studies. Successfully completed they will point the way to future UN actions which may be needed to preserve the peace in some other part of the globe. But if allowed to wither and fall from lack of money, their defeat will make it more difficult to rouse united action if it once more is called for.

The costs of these operations are heavy. But can anyone say they are more expensive than war?

In the Wrong Company

SOME OF THE WELL-INTENTIONED ban-the-bomb elements in Britain—clergymen, housewives, members of parliament, ordinary citizens frightened by the nuclear age into which they have been projected—find themselves in odd company when, side by side with "long-haired youths in blue jeans" they battle police through the streets of London.

The Aldermaston marches at Easter time have become established as an annual event. They began as a peaceful demonstration by law-abiding Britons against the nuclear armaments which they believed would imperil world peace and their own nation's life. But what are they now becoming? What elements are "taking them over"?

Milling mobs of frenzied people fighting the police have no place in the British democratic system. Such phenomena one thinks of as occurring in South America or parts of Europe, where more fiery types of temperament influence politics. In Britain, it is the wrong approach and will have a wrong result.

It is hard to dismiss a belief that the peaceful folk who originated the ban-the-bomb marches are being taken advantage of by more sinister elements. When Communist banners and slogans appear in such demonstrations, it seems obvious that there is in operation a phase of Communist activity of which we have many times been told—the organized cells, the strategy and tactics of street violence, the planned obstruction and humiliation of the law, the alignment with popular causes in order to milk from them such public support of Communism as may be forthcoming.

Everyone will respect the ideals of ban-the-bombers even though they may not agree with their arguments. But the demonstrators will earn no respect by rowdiness in the streets, nor will they further their cause by close association with interests which work only for the day when the freedoms which ban-the-bombers utilize would be denied them.

Sharp Eye on British Parks

CANADIANS WHO PAY A RETURN visit to Britain's Lake District after an absence of many years, find much that is familiar to them, relatively little change in the more picturesque parts of the region.

There are now "caravan parks"—Britain's equivalent of trailer centres—in some areas, but rigid adherence to restrictions has prevented the desecration of beauty spots.

In recent days the Ramblers' Association of that country has taken additional steps to avoid further undesirable change by seeking the protection of walking paths in this and other park areas. The motor car will be accommodated, up to a point, but the Ramblers seek to fix limits to its intrusion.

This is a gratifying conservation attitude that should win the applause of visitors from distant lands who have gone to the Lake District with high expectations and found them fulfilled.

In Britain, moreover, strong efforts are being made to avoid the withdrawal of present parklands from public use for development of defence installations, nuclear electricity generating stations and other elements of modern society in a country where relatively wild land is in short supply.

The situation there differs from that in British Columbia. We have square miles where Britain has acres in a natural state. But the problems of preservation are comparable.

Britain is constantly alert to the intrusion of interests which might threaten the beauty of parks. Canadians are becoming more aware of the dangers. But here we have yet to form a well-organized body of conservationists who can meet the threats that rise as commercial interests seek to exploit resources to the detriment of wilderness recreation areas.

How lucky can you get?

FROM WHERE WE SIT

We're Middlemen When It Comes to Size

By B. A. TOBIN

SOME scientist once made the interesting observation that man seems to be established in the general neighborhood of mid-way in the scale of size in the universe. Not exactly, of course, but we seem to be of about average size in the scheme of things. Compared with the tiniest particles in existence — electrons and similar units — we're enormous. But compared with the vast immensities of space we're insignificant.

Being around mid-way provides a good vantage point from which to explore the two extremes of the scale. And this man has not ceased to do, apparently, since he developed a curiosity and means of satisfying it.

The process no doubt began, on the one hand, with wanting to see what was on the far side of the mountain. And on the other, with picking a carcass or flower to pieces to see what was inside. We've gone pretty far afield since that beginning, until now the apparent rim of the cosmos is our outward boundary. And we've done some pretty minute peering too, until even the atom — which is no great lump by any standards — is being whittled into its tiny component parts.

The latest developments in these enterprises are enough to leave the layman in a mental whirl.

Radio astronomy has, of course, greatly increased our range of observation. Light waves become distorted and dim from travelling through the dust of space and the blanket of our atmosphere, although even with this impediment we've done pretty well with our cameras and telescopes.

Three years ago, for instance, an astronomer pushed back the existing photographic limits from the two billion light years we had thought was the farthest we could see, to six billion light years. He photographed a galaxy estimated to be 36 billion million million miles away. The light he caught in his lens had left its source six billion years ago.

But the radio telescopes push even deeper into space than this; now astronomers are thinking in terms of sources up to 12 billion light years away.

Even much nearer home, we find we're rather lonely in space. If we imagine our sun as the centre of a huge sphere of space extending for 90 million million miles in every direction from it, only 50 other stars would be found in all that void. That's hardly neighborly; even the nearest of them would be 26 million million miles from us.

From a concept like that we can jump to the opposite extreme. Peering into the atom we find that what we used to think were pretty solid particles of matter disintegrate under powerful new instruments of detection.

The old atom of protons and electrons, the latter revolving around the central nucleus like planets in a solar system, was much too clumsy a concept. The thing broke down into infinitely smaller units, mesons and such whose size defies imagination. And it seems to be about as lonely inside the atom for these tiny particles as it is for our sun in its incredible void.

Being average has its compensations. Seen your next-door neighbor lately?

By JOSEPH ALSOP

FROM VIENNA

Will the Postwar Era Become a Prewar Era?

OFFICIALLY, this city is not one of the capitals of the Western Alliance, by reason of the Austrians' commitment to a neutral policy in their peace treaty with the Soviets.

Yet Vienna is not a bad place to try to sum up the results of a long European tour, for it has its own lesson. The Soviets relaxed their grip on Vienna and on most of Austria for only two reasons: because the Austrian people were courageous and united, and because the Western Alliance was united and strong.

The facts are all the more important to remember because the Western Alliance today is most certainly not united, and in some respects it has almost ceased to be an alliance. In Paris, where this reporter stopped briefly on the way here, all the allied foreign ministers were making the familiar allied noises, but they had a very hollow ring.

The plain truth of the matter is that we are close to the end of the postwar era, which will come when Chancellor Adenauer hands over the leadership of Germany to his successor. And it is well to remember that the ends of postwar eras have always, in the past, led to the dissolution of alliances.

There is a practical, almost mechanical reason for this curious historical phenomenon.

Grand alliances, like the union of the powers that finally overcame Napoleon, or our Western Alliance, are formed in the enforced international intimacy of wartime. In war, victory is the only preoccupation, and thus the wartime leaders are accustomed to sacrificing petty local interests to the larger interests of the alliance.

But let a Castlereagh be succeeded by a Canning. Or let Dean G. Acheson and Robert A. Lovett be replaced by exceptionally able younger men of the Kennedy administration. Then there is an end to the old, war-imposed familiarity with the problems of the alliance as a whole and of all its constituent members. And then the danger to the alliance begins.

In the present instance, the danger is particularly acute because the strongest figure in Europe, Gen. de Gaulle, can reasonably be described as anti-Alliance. He keeps saying he is not. He means it. Yet what he says is untrue.

The apparent contradiction vanishes when you grasp the simple fact that what Gen. de Gaulle means by an alliance is quite different from what anyone else means.

Loose Agreement

At most, he means the kind of loose agreement to fight on the same side in case of need that France and Czarist Russia had before the First World War.

In the H-bomb age and the era of the cold war, this kind of alliance which Gen. de Gaulle favors would be quite useless. Meanwhile he is against the kind of alliance the cold war demands — an alliance in which all the allies continuously co-ordinate their views and policies by a continuous process of compromise and mutual consideration, as the Western allies formerly did.

Despite the allied noises everyone made in Paris, there are in fact very few major problems of foreign policy, and almost no problems on defence policy, on which the Western allies are now fully agreed.

The machine functions in a kind of way because the machinery is there. Even so, no one can say what will happen to NATO in 1968-69, when Gen. de Gaulle will have to consent to the renewal of the NATO treaty.

By the same token, no one can say what the effect on the Western Alliance will be if Harold Wilson is Britain's next Prime Minister. His election is less certain than Washington seems to believe. But if elected, he is also less certain to be a helpful ally than Washington now supposes.

In the days of Castlereagh and Canning, all these threats to the alliance could have been accepted with greater equanimity. But in the era of the H-bomb and the cold war, the situation is very different indeed.

If the Western Alliance holds together somehow, there is every reason to be confident that we can go on living peacefully albeit at times dangerously. But if the Western Alliance falls apart, it is almost as certain as the succession of the seasons that the end of the postwar era, which is now so close, will also prove to be the beginning of a prewar era.

The main concern, therefore, must be the maintenance of the Alliance. In this respect, President Kennedy will get some help from the Kremlin. The new turn of Soviet inner politics may well bring on the kind of renewal of Soviet aggressiveness that has helped to strengthen the Alliance in the past.

Nonetheless, it is also clear that the Alliance must be modified and modernized if it is to survive and be effective. This is now the primary task facing the President.

SEATO Crisis

Guardian Weekly

THE news from Laos has grave implications; the civil war may grow hot again. It is probably fortunate that the Foreign Ministers of some of the countries concerned are meeting in Paris at this time; they can consult together on what ought to be done.

But really the Soviet foreign minister ought to be there too; he and Lord Home, as co-chairmen of the Geneva conference, bear the initial responsibility for ensuring that the broken Laotian peace does not also rupture international peace.

The truth is, as it has been for the past nine years, that SEATO is almost irrelevant among the complexities of Southeast Asian politics. Unlike Ceto it has probably not done much positive harm to the Western cause; it is simply hard to take seriously.

The best argument for its continued existence is that it would be politically impossible to abolish it. But ought not the Soviet Union, as a reward for its share in checking Communist aggression in Laos and the Himalaya last year, to be invited to become a member?

As Our Readers See It

Slovenly Phraseology

When our new government takes up duty in Ottawa I hope it will consider taking some effective action to enhance the dignity and maturity of Parliament — and the country — by dissociating itself from the slovenly phraseology which is now so widespread and so actively propagated by the press and radio. Steadily we are being perverted to an uncouth and illiterate people.

Almost hourly throughout every day we hear and read — among other banalities — of Prime Minister "A", Defence Minister "B", Agriculture Minister "C", and so forth. These appellations are not correct usage for the titles of the individuals concerned and, I'm quite sure, have been imposed on us by people who are either too arrogant, too careless or too untutored to be precise. It may be argued that the abnormal usage is now customary in Canada but, if so, it is a bad custom and there is no good reason why it should be perpetuated or condoned any longer.

The words "prime minister," in the English-speaking country where they were first used, are considered as a noun and do not require to be followed by a proper name. Surely everyone in Canada knows the name of the Prime — or First — Minister! If it is really necessary to prefix anything other than "Mr." to his name, the word "Premier" is to be preferred.

Also, writers and speakers, when referring to cabinet ministers and other members of the government, will best maintain correct standards by using correct titles: minister of defence, minister of finance, etc. If further degeneration takes place we may expect some day to hear the head of the Supreme Court referred to as "justice chief." But that, I imagine, will be outside the court and out-of-earshot of the Chief Justice.

Silly

Having resided in Victoria for the past 12 years, it has been a rather perplexing experience to have listened, on several occasions, to orations by the premier of this province.

Anyone schooled in the prudent use of language to avoid the mien of a blustering boastfulness, will detect at once a wild irresponsibility in many of the public statements coming from the mouth of the Hon. W. A. C. Bennett.

Among several wild assertions made by him at a recent Sacred meeting in this city, was the highlight of the evening when he introduced the federal leader of the Social Credit Movement as no less than "the next Prime Minister of Canada."

One might wonder now, since the clear rejection of this fictitious "movement" by the voters of Canada, just how silly this man must now feel after the people have been so solidly shown how silly most of his predictions turn out to be.

H. V. O'REILLY.

No Nuclear Arms

The testimony of American Defence Secretary McNamara has shown how foolish it would be for Canada to obtain nuclear warheads for its two Bomarc missiles.

Also, the multilateral nuclear force being promoted by the United States for NATO is said to be considered by American defence experts as "ill-timed, ill-conceived and unnecessary" and civilian authorities in the Pentagon are reported as fearing that the "more nuclear weapons there are in Europe, the greater are the chances of accidental wars or of using those weapons to 'escalate' little wars into big ones."

Moreover, Mr. McNamara has testified that there is no adequate defence against intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Thus, it has become clear that Canada's only course it to take no steps, for the time being at least, toward acquiring any nuclear arms. Friendly co-operation with our southern neighbor is important but even more important is world-wide co-operation directed toward lessening the danger of suicidal global war.

Groos for Cabinet

In view of Liberal Party success in B.C., I suggest it would be a nice gesture by the Federal government if the capital city of the province had cabinet representation.

In view of its large naval and military forces being located here, the appointment of Minister of Defence could well fill the bill. Mr. David Groos, the only Victoria Liberal elected, should be competent to give the capital city such representation.

Pollution of Portage

It is to be expected that those in authority will, among other important aspects of the Saanich sewer proposal, make a study of the tide conditions affecting the silt flats at the mouth of Colquitz Creek. These flats extend out into Portage Inlet a thousand feet — and are nearly as wide. The flats have been formed by the incoming tides backing up Colquitz Creek, and the silt in the creek waters settling.

These flats are for long periods of time daily exposed to the air when the tide is out — especially during the low summer tides when the whole area is exposed. It is revolting to think of the effluent settling with the silt over these flats — day after day as the tides back up the waters of this little creek. During the summer also the creek becomes barely a rivulet and this large proposed volume of effluent draining into it would make it nothing but an open sewer.

AUNTY SEWER.

Harvison's Reply

Following is the full text of a letter written by RCMP Commissioner C. W. Harvison, formerly of Victoria, to Sidney Katz, author of an article in Maclean's magazine dated April 20 and entitled: "Inside Canada's Secret Police."

This letter refers to your article "Inside Canada's Secret Police" and to Mr. Lefolli's editorial in the April 20 issue of Maclean's magazine. It may be that Mr. Lefolli's avowed interest in "rudimentary justice" will indicate to him that this letter should be given as much prominence as was devoted to your material.

You will recall that on Jan. 11 you wrote asking for an appointment with me and with senior officers to discuss the work of the Force. In your letter you said "... We at Maclean's feel that it would be in the public interest as well as in the interest of the RCMP to publish a major up-to-date article dealing with the responsibilities, the activities and the problems of the RCMP."

Your proposal seemed fair and reasonable and was accepted in good faith. Arrangements were made whereby you had a very lengthy interview with me and with several senior officers. It was our hope that it would lead to a fair and unbiased factual article.

It is a matter of deep regret that my acceptance of your proposal has led to the publication of such an article as "Inside Canada's Secret Police." That article contains so many errors, untruths and half truths that some comment from me seems necessary.

If during our lengthy interviews you had made the slightest attempt to check or verify the rumors and misinformation that you had picked up somewhere, we would have been able to supply you with facts in most of the instances to which you refer in your article. In other cases we could not have supplied information since we have no record of occurrences such as alleged, but this alone might have indicated to you that your source or sources were something less than reliable.

The fact that you did not trouble to check your information when you had ample opportunity to do so, plus the fact that out of many hours of interviews you used only a few lines regarding those interviews, seems to indicate that the purpose of your visit to our Headquarters was to enable you to use a few quotes to lend some semblance of authenticity to your "Inside" story.

In his editorial, Mr. Lefolli says—"Some of these persecutions are documented in the report on the RCMP's Security and Intelligence Branch, by Sidney Katz, that opens on Page 13 of this issue. We will describe only one of them here, because one case is all it takes to define—or violate—a principle."

"In 1952 a 27-year-old Canadian was discharged from the RCAF without explanation. He was subsequently discharged from a series of jobs, again, in each case, without explanation. By long inquiry he eventually learned that all of the discharges had been the result of an RCMP report that described him as a 'poor security risk.' In answer to an MP's questioning, the Commissioner of the RCMP said, 'This man was once secretary of the Communist Youth Organization in Regina.' The RCMP was wrong. There was a mistake in the dossier: the man had, in fact, once been secretary of the CCF youth group in Regina. There was a second absurd entry in the dossier. An RCMP investigator had questioned one of the man's school teachers, who had described him as 'a young Bolshevik.'"

Mr. Lefolli probably relied on the accuracy of your article in using the above case as an example of persecution—and of your "documentation." In the interests of accuracy and fairness, he would have been well advised to check his or your source.

The RCMP did not, as alleged, make the absurd mistake of confusing the CCF with the Communist Party. The file has been reviewed many times and on several occasions by Ministers of Justice. As to your "documentation," you are just four years out in your date. The case occurred in 1948, not in 1952 as stated by the Editor and by you. It is of interest to note that whereas in your letter to me you indicated an interest in writing "a major up-to-date article," you and Editor Lefolli had to go back 15 years to dredge up this example of alleged persecution.

While Mr. Lefolli was content to rest his arguments regarding persecution and documentation on the above example, I consider that I should mention several of the cases referred to in your article since I have made the statement that that article contains fabrications and half truths.

You alleged that for some years we have been calling once each year to question an elderly lady in Regina because she is a Christian Democrat, and you even give this case a special caption "The Case of the 74-year-old Widow." This is fabrication on the part of someone. It is just simply untrue. It is interesting that you do not mention a name in this case whereas you do mention names in other cases throughout your article.

Another example of what your Editor refers to as documentation is provided when in your article you say that information passed on by the RCMP to the U.S. Immigration Service via the FBI has, on occasion, inconvenienced guiltless Canadian citizens. You continue—

"A few months ago a British Columbia professor whose political activity was limited to espousing the cause of the Doukhobors, was held up at the border while U.S. officials questioned him about his recent speeches and activities."

While we do not have a file on this gentleman, we do know something of him from the public press and TV. His interest in the Doukhobor problem and in various Civil Liberties activities has also been mentioned prominently in the Communist press. It may be safe to assume that the U.S. Immigration Service and the FBI read the Communist Pacific Tribune. At any rate, the RCMP has never submitted a report on this man and—as an example of the sort of research back of your article—the man is a United States citizen, not a Canadian. You could have secured these facts by asking just one question during your interviews with us. Further, we would have to point out that questions asked of a U.S. citizen by the U.S. authorities are scarcely the concern of this Force.

On the second page of your article you have a special yellow box headed "The Political Police and the Universities." Under that caption is printed a statement which you allege was made by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice on Jan. 21 in the House of Commons.

Since the actual statement appears in Hansard, it is a little difficult to understand how an error could be made. Yet you have dropped one word and that word changes the meaning of the quotation. This misquotation is used to support your false accusation that "the Justice Ministry in short did not speak the truth."

If you will refer to Hansard, you will find that the word "political" appears before the word "activities" and that the correct quotation reads—

"Members of the RCMP are not engaged in interviewing students and faculty members at Canadian universities about the political views and political activities of other students and faculty members."

Your error is even more difficult to understand since we discussed this very point during our interview. I made the clear distinction between subversion and espionage on the one hand and political activities on the other, and pointed out that while we are concerned with subversion and espionage, we are not interested in political views or political activities. It is perfectly clear that there was no contradiction in the statement made by the Parliamentary Secretary.

If you refer again to Hansard, you will find that on two occasions the Minister of Justice said that he would make a complete statement regarding our Security and Intelligence activities when the estimates of the RCMP were before the House. It is unfortunate indeed that the Minister of Justice did not have the opportunity to make his statement before your article was published.

One could dwell for some time on the slant given your article by such statements as—

"To reach it (the S&I branch office) you ascend by a rear elevator, alight in an anteroom and are then admitted through doors which are always kept locked. Behind a bare desk sits the chief of security."

It all sounds grim, bare and forbidding. Actually there is no "rear elevator." You do alight in an anteroom and the office doors are locked as is the case in most offices. The chief of security has a comfortable, well-furnished office and if at the time of your visit the desk was bare, the reason should be obvious to you.

I could enlarge on these observations but I think I have said enough to demonstrate that your article could not be allowed to pass without comment. The minister of justice shares this opinion and this letter has been written and forwarded to you with his full approval.

In opening your article, you express concern that the reputation of the Force is being tarnished because of our counter-espionage work. I am not too concerned on these grounds since I believe that the public has confidence in the Force and knows that we are performing a difficult task with all possible care and precautions. However, I am concerned with the impression that the public might draw from misleading and confusing reports such as you have written.

Khrushchev Marks 69th Birthday

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
Premier Khrushchev is 69 today. He doesn't exactly mellow with age.

But if he died tomorrow the West would have to say—but for the opposite reason—what Sir Winston Churchill said of Stalin's death in 1953: That it was a "milestone in Russian history."

Khrushchev is no Santa Claus. But he's a vast improvement over Stalin, a brutal dictator. In short, there could be worse than Khrushchev as the West will realize with regret if his successor tries to turn the clock back.

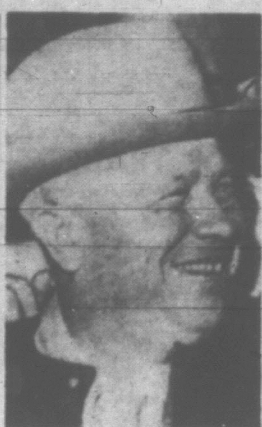

Stalin risked world wars with the Korean conflict and the Berlin blockade. Khrushchev took chances, but not as haz- ardously as Stalin, with the Berlin wall and slipping missiles into Cuba.

FOUR MAIN FEATS

Khrushchev has done four things above all since Stalin's death 10 years ago:

1. He has given the Russian people a far better life than they have had since the Bolshevik revolution of 1917. They have more freedom, although far from full freedom. And the terroristic secret police system has been subordinated.

2. He has destroyed the Stalin myth by his 1956 denunciation of the dictator. This had a liberating effect not only on Russian thinking but on communism in the satellites and around the world.

KHRUSHCHEV

3. By showing more reasonableness than Stalin he has eased East-West tensions and made war less likely, not necessarily because he wouldn't try if he thought he could win but because he realizes he might not.

4. By trying to avoid war, through a policy less aggressive than Stalin's, Khrushchev has precipitated a split with his Communist Chinese allies. Such a split seemed inevitable eventually. He hastened it.

Newcomers Preened for Show

On Friday and Saturday of this week any person in Victoria can have the pleasure of viewing as choice a collection of rock and alpine plants as may be seen anywhere in North America.

The Vancouver Island Rock and Alpine Garden Society will be holding its annual show in the Memorial Hall, at the corner of Vancouver Street and Rockland Avenue, and the display of plants this year could well include some not previously seen in the spring show.

The season has been a little precocious at times, so that plants usually not in bloom until the end of April may be at their best now.

The society was formed in 1936 by a few rock garden enthusiasts with the idea of furthering interest in this type of gardening which is so well suited to many parts of Vancouver Island.

—Since then its objects have been extended to include other forms of gardening which are frequently found in conjunction with the rock and alpine garden. Thus some of the subjects discussed at meetings are bog plants, water gardens, woodland plants and lilies, and representatives of these groups will be found exhibited in the various classes of the show.

Entries are open to non-members as well as members, exhibitors having until 10 a.m. on Friday to place their exhibits for judging.

Information regarding details of the show may be obtained from V. Ahler, 382-3007. While this show is outstanding for the quality and variety of plants, it could be wished that the lighting arrangements for studying these frequently small plants will be improved this year, for so much of their beauty is lost when indoor lighting is inadequate.

Art Smugglers Fined

MADRID (AP)—A Spanish customs court has levied fines totalling more than 15,000,000 pesetas ($261,000) against a New Yorker identified as Stanley Moss and two other persons accused of smuggling a Goya painting out of Spain. The official Gazette, announcing the fines, said the trio was responsible for the illegal export of Goya's St. Jerome, "now somewhere outside of Spain."

JFK to Tolerate Steel Price Hikes?

By GORDON BELL, Times Business Editor

Despite the nervous reaction of Wall Street to the U.S. Steel announcement that it is joining the price boost parade, there seems to be a general feeling now that there will not be a violent presidential reaction to the moves by the industry such as the one last year, which is Gordon Bell's prediction with triggering the massive stock market correction.

So far, the increases do seem to fall within the definition of "selective" which President Kennedy has already indicated he would tolerate.

In addition, Armco Steel has made a move, which the industry generally is expected to be forced to follow, of reducing prices on a fairly broad range of wire products which should temper the impact of increases on other steel products.

There is, also, the important question of whether or not the steel companies can make the increases stick in the face of increasing competition from foreign steel producers and domestic and foreign producers of materials which can substitute for steel in many applications.

The suggestion being heard in U.S. business circles is that President Kennedy would not be wise not to interfere in this situation but rather should let it be resolved in the free market of supply and demand.

In any event, whether he intercedes this time or not, financial circles apparently do not believe the steel industry's pricing problems will have the impact on the stock market that was experienced last year.

The situation is not at all the same as it was then when business was down and stock prices were wildly inflated in many cases and a correction was thought to be long overdue.

Webb and Knapp Canada Ltd. during the year.

Current liabilities at Dec. 31 were $10,951,259 and current assets $2,196,134.

Directly owned real estate value was $51,829,684 after depreciation and value of investment, including interest in Place Ville Marie Ltd. and other properties, was $14,584,294.

Long-term debt at Dec. 31 was $90,864,191.

Shares of Pacific Petroleum Ltd. will be listed on the "Big Board" at New York starting next Monday. It was announced at annual meeting in Calgary by president John Getgood.

Pacific will be the only Canadian petroleum company to be listed on the NYSE, and Mr. Getgood said approval of the listing by the exchange governors marked an important milestone for the company.

Pacific earned its first million dollar quarterly profit this year—$1,017,500 net compared to $868,217 in the first quarter last year.

'Return to Fold,' Diem Urges Reds

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (Reuters) — President Ngo Dinh Diem today offered clemency to Communist sympathizers and opponents of his government both in South Viet Nam and abroad.

In a proclamation marking the first anniversary of the government's successful U.S.-assisted "strategic hamlets" program to combat Communist guerrillas, Diem called on his government's enemies to "come back soon to the just cause."

The appeal was directed to "all persons, both those in the country or living abroad, who have been flattered, deceived and exploited by the Communists."

Government sources said it did not apply to "hard-core Communists" who must be eliminated. The sources stressed the president's proclamation was not an amnesty offer. Criminals would be punished for crimes listed in the penal code, but could be pardoned for war crimes.

The amnesty follows a sharp increase in the number of guerrillas who have surrendered during the last three months—in one week in March, 80 guerrillas defected to government forces, compared with the weekly average of 30 to 35 last year.

PARDON US! WE WERE PLUMB WRONG

City parks administrator W. H. Warren Tuesday said that Heywood Avenue's well-known flowering trees are Yoshino Flowering Cherries from Japan, not Japanese plum trees as erroneously reported in Monday's "Ask the Times" column.

"Unfortunately, this cherry is practically unobtainable from local nurseries," he said.

Mr. Warren said over 350 Yoshino Cherries are planted on Trutch, Cambridge, Richardson, Pandora, South Turner, Moss and Hillside.

"What is commonly called 'Japanese plum,' and quite erroneously so, is the purple-leaved flowering plum (which) comes from Iran..." he said.

It Didn't Look Like a Game For the Young

By UP INTERNATIONAL

Baseball may be a young man's game but you couldn't prove it Tuesday to a foursome of National League veterans with a total of 66 years of big league experience under their belts.

They're the Milwaukee Braves' Warren Spahn, 41, and Ed Mathews, 31; the San Francisco Giants' Billy Pierce, 36, and the St. Louis Cardinals' Stan Musial, 42. Their average age is 38 but they're starting off the new season as frisky as the most ambitious rookies.

Spahn scored the 329th victory of his career and Mathews became the eighth player in baseball history to hit 400 homers in the Braves' 8-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Pierce extended his streak of consecutive wins at Candlestick Park to 14 with a 7-0 win over Houston Colts and Musial became the first man to accumulate 6,000 total bases in the Cardinals' 4-3 triumph over Pittsburgh Pirates.

METS LOSE AGAIN

Cincinnati Reds extended New York Mets' losing streak to seven games with a 7-4 decision and Chicago Cubs edged Los Angeles Dodgers, 2-1, in 12 innings in other National League action.

In the American League, Detroit Tigers defeated New York Yankees, 7-2; Kansas City Athletics beat Chicago White Sox, 7-4; Cleveland Indians shut out the Washington Senators, 3-0; Los Angeles Angels nipped Minnesota Twins, 11-10, and Boston Red Sox topped Baltimore Orioles, 6-1.

Spahn pitched a four-hitter and struck out seven in winning his second straight game of the season and raising his N.L. career shutout record for left-handers to 56. Spahn now ranks No. 8 on the all-time winning list. Mathews' first homer of 1963 came in the seventh inning and lifted him in to a select circle which also includes Babe Ruth, Jimmy Foxx, Ted Williams, Mel Ott, Lou Gehrig, Mickey Mantle and Musial.

FIRST OF SEASON

Pierce, who never has been beaten at Candlestick Park, pitched a six-hitter and fanned six. It was his first win of the season and the 26th of his 17-year career. Felipe Alou drove in two runs with a single and a double to lead the eighth San Francisco attack.

Musial contributed a single to the Cardinals' 12-hit attack, raising his career total bases to 6,000. Hall-of-Famer Ty Cobb ranks second to Musial on the all-time list with 5,863. The Cardinals trailed going in to the last of the ninth when Duke Carmel tied the score with a homer. Dick Groat then doubled and scored on an error by Julio Gotay.

U.S. Horse Wins

NEWMARKET, England (AP) — American-owned Crockett Tuesday snatched a head victory over long-shot Victory Way in the one-mile Craven Horse Stakes, a race that provides a guide to the English classics. Venturer was third.

LIONS WORK TO CULTIVATE ...

For Most, There Are Only Bruises and Humility

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions have been chided in the past for letting Canadian players slip through their fingers. Nowadays they're more careful.

A case in point is the junior development camp that began here Tuesday with 48 high school heroes grunting in the mud and rain.

If there is promise left after 10 days of ego-shattering, it should be apparent, and ready for one of four programs of training recommended by the Western Football Conference club. The camp offers a first and last chance for most of the group. Rejection at this stage usually means the player lacks co-ordination to put his size and talents to work.

Brett McGillivray, an 18-year-old quarterback from Kamloops, expressed it as well as anyone. His brother Derek, a baseball pitcher, is on contract with New York Yankees, attended a year at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont., and hopes to make enough money with a farm club to continue his education. And Brett will need a scholarship if he hopes to go to college for football training.

"This winter I gave up hockey so I could have more study time," he said. "I got a book with a list of all the big colleges in the states and I wrote letters to a bunch of them, asking about sports scholarships."

"... Maybe if I go good in this camp, a college will give me a chance. I don't want to go to one of these schools where they give you a diploma as long as you don't miss any tackles. I want a good school."

"But first, I've gotta go good in this camp. It might be my last chance."

Denny Veitch, co-ordinator of Lions' minor football organization, says McGillivray's best course appears to be "category four" in the program.

"This means a year of junior football. He would play for Vancouver Blue Bombers, get a job to put away some money, and pick up some high-school subjects on the side. Then he might be ready for a scholarship."

A prospect for "category one," a straight leap to Lions' June training camp on Vancouver Island, is 18-year-old Tom Sheremeta of suburban Burnaby. He is a six-foot one-inch, 245-pound tackle with a chance of making the club in 1963 or 1964.

Failing that, he might also use a year of study to reach his matriculation, then go into category three — four years at an American college or category four, four years at the University of B.C.

Joe Davies of the UBC coaching staff is working with Lions coaches and hoping to grab several men. Among the top prospects are quarterback Peter Smith and fullback Jim Walker of Vancouver and quarterback Roger Klingenspon of Kelowna.

But for every young man who emerges next week with a football future, many more home-town idols will take away only bruises and humility.

"This," says Veitch, "is the great equalizer."

Optimistic Leafs Go Home With 3-1 Edge In Series

DETROIT (CP) — Punch Imlach, a notorious advocate of playing hockey one game at a time, has finally crawled out on a limb.

After his Toronto Maple Leafs belted Detroit Red Wings 4-2 Tuesday night, the manager-coach predicted they will wrap up their second straight Stanley Cup Thursday.

"If they don't, they're a bunch of doughheads."

Since the Leafs enjoy a 3-1 edge in the best-of-seven series and Thursday's hostilities take place in the friendly confines of Maple Leaf Gardens, Imlach deserves few medals for bravery. But he could hardly be blamed for crowing.

The Wings gave it their all — some Detroit players admitted it quietly in their dressing room after the game. Gordie Howe, the always dependable right winger who, in his words, "was lousy" in the first three games, was a standout.

"Sure it hurt us," said Detroit manager-coach Sid Abel of the loss before 13,971 fans at Detroit Olympia.

Old John Shines

The Leaf who did most to frustrate the Wings was the oldest player in the National Hockey League — goaltender Johnny Bower. The veteran reminder, listed by the record books as 38 and by many observers as more than 40, made 38 saves in stalling a spirited Detroit attack.

Bower's only miscue came on the first goal, a shot by Howe from just inside the Toronto blueline. The Leaf goaltender tried to get his glove on it, but missed.

Howe also had an assist on the Wings' second goal, by rookie Ed Joly, scored two goals for Leafs. George Armstrong and Dave Keon, the latter with an assist from Detroit centre Norm Ullman, were the other Toronto marksmen.

Keon's goal, at 9:42, of the third period, proved to be the winner. Ullman's skate happened to be in the right place at the right time to deflect the puck into the net after the Leaf centre had dilly-daddled among several Red Wings.

Two Errors Costly

Detroit defenceman Bill Gadsby had one of his best games of the playoffs — except on two plays. Each one cost the Wings a goal.

Gadsby fell to his knees trying to stop Kelly's shot on the red line's first goal, at 17:41 of the second period. Instead, Gadsby screened Detroit goaltender Terry Sawchuk and the puck whizzed by him.

In the third period, Leaf centre Bob Pulford was about to break through the Wings' defence, but Gadsby grabbed him. While he was off for a holding penalty, Kelly got his second goal. That was at 17:45 and boosted the score to 4-2 out of reach for Detroit.

Keon was instrumental in Armstrong's goal. He dug the puck from behind the Detroit net and passed from the corner in front of the goal. The Leaf captain whacked it past Sawchuk at 1:17 of the second period.

Punch Praises Keon

Imlach had nothing but praise for Keon after the game. He called him Leafs' most valuable player and added:

"If I was asked to pick one, I'd have to take him. I wouldn't trade him for Gordie Howe. He's young — 23 — and can do everything."

Joly helped set up his own goal at 2:38 of the second period. He zig-zagged with shooting distance, but Bower stopped the puck. Seconds later it came to the rookie behind the net and, with Bower flat on the ice well out of the goal, Joly whipped his stick around the side of the net and neatly tucked the puck in.

If the Leafs fail to justify Imlach's optimism Thursday, the sixth game of the series will be played here Sunday night. A seventh game would be played in Toronto next Tuesday.

HALFBACK SIGNED

OTTAWA (UPI) — Defensive halfback William Tucker, top rookie in the Canadian Football League last season, has signed his 1963 contract with Ottawa Rough Riders.

PUNCH IMLACH ... optimistic now

'FROM WINDSOR,' SAYS SID

Surly Crowd Taunts Leafs

DETROIT (CP) — Even Red Kelly, once one of their favorite sons, wasn't spared abuse in a wild demonstration by name-calling Detroit hockey fans Tuesday night.

Kelly, one of the mildest-mannered players in the National Hockey League — and a Detroit Red Wing for 12½ years before joining Toronto Maple Leafs in 1960 — shared the taunts as the Leafs went to their dressing room.

Toronto had just handed Detroit a 4-2 loss to take a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final.

As the Leafs left the ice, someone in the stands hurled a giant firecracker in their direction. But that was only a start.

The crowd closed in around the walkway to the Toronto dressing room and pelted the Leafs with paper cups, balls of paper and programs. Defenceman Carl Brewer was hit in the face with a cup. Eddie Shack was hit dangerously near the eye with a hard ball of paper.

Brewer raised his stick in defiance and the crowd fell back. Then Frank Mahovlich challenged two surly youths, but continued to the dressing room before anything serious happened.

As the Leafs left the ice, someone in the stands hurled a giant firecracker in their direction. But that was only a start.

The fans were free with profanity and Imlach finally gave up. He didn't want reporters in the Leaf dressing room because of their limited quarters.

"Go back to the Old Country," one man yelled to newspapermen. "Lucky blanket-blanks" cried another.

"You've seen your last game of the season," yelled Imlach, suggesting Toronto will win the series Thursday night in Toronto. "Why don't you go home?"

He tried to move farther down the lobby so reporters could hear him, but the taunting fans followed.

Finally, Imlach returned to the dressing room — with several reporters acting as bodyguards — and invited the press inside.

"I've never seen them like this," said Brewer in the dressing room.

"You'll probably find they aren't Detroit fans," said Red Wing coach Sid Abel. "A lot of them are from Windsor (across the river from Detroit)."

Faubus Appears At Mixed Game

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Governor Orval Faubus of Arkansas threw out the first ball Tuesday night at the first desegregated baseball game ever played in Little Rock.

Seven hundred Negroes were among the estimated 7,000 fans at the first International League game here. There were no incidents.

Faubus was the centre of the Little Rock school desegregation controversies in 1957.

He tried to move farther down the lobby so reporters could hear him, but the taunting fans followed.

Directing Coaches' Clinic

Checking notes between track and field classes at Victoria College campus are Vancouver's Dave Abbott (left) and Geoffrey Dyson, former head coach of England's Amateur Athletic Union. Abbott is director of Canadian Legion's first regional clinic for coaches, now in session at Gordon Head, and Dyson is head man of Legion's national Junior Olympic Training Plan. Almost 80 coaches are attending four-day clinic, which is part of program to develop more and better track and field stars in Canada. (Times photo by Bill Halkett.)

Fourth Estate Divided On Suspension Incident

EDMONTON (CP) — Infinite suspensions of two Saskatchewan sports-casters by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has stirred comment from Ottawa to Vancouver.

Sports-casters and sport reporters Tuesday were divided in their opinion of the action taken by CAHA president Art Potter of Edmonton in suspending Ken Newans of CHAB, Moose Jaw, and Linus Westberg of CKOS-TV, Yorkton, from broadcasting CAHA games. The two were suspended after their broadcasts of a game between Edmonton Oil Kings and the Estevan Bruins in Edmonton Saturday night.

Veteran Winnipeg broadcaster Jack Wells backed Potter's move. Wells said comments by other broadcasters and reporters had missed the point.

"PERFECT RIGHT"

"The CAHA is not trying to muzzle the press or radio but if a broadcaster handling a game which is under CAHA jurisdiction and is doing a job which is detrimental to the game or an individual, they have the perfect right to pursue the action they have taken."

Sports writer Gord Walker of Toronto charged CAHA action as "censorship."

In Vancouver, CBC sports-caster Ted Reynolds said Potter's move "is perhaps a little beyond what I consider to be his power."

Al Shaver, sports-caster for CFRN in Edmonton, condoned the action but added the incident pointed out the need for a paid CAHA commissioner able to devote full time to enforce regulations and maintaining officiating standards.

DEFEATS PURPOSE

Broadcasting rights were given, he said, in the hope of creating interest in the sport but when a sports-caster criticizes it "this defeats the purpose of the broadcast."

Potter suspended Newans and Westberg for "improper use of broadcast privileges..." by continuously and severely criticizing officials, thereby giving an erroneous picture of the game played."

Westberg denied that he had called the Oil Kings a "bunch of butchers."

VANCOUVER ELIMINATES DAILY DOUBLE BETTING

VANCOUVER (CP) — For the first time in decades, there will be no daily double betting at Exhibition Park race course, which opens this season on May 3.

Traditionally held on the first and second races, the double will be replaced by a quinella on the first race. Exacto betting, inaugurated last season, will again be on the fourth race, along with the long-established quinella on the eighth.

REVENUE MEN GRAB SLICE OF BIG WIN

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Royal W. Holmes, 33, of Jewett City, Conn., was identified Tuesday as the holder of a twin-double ticket worth $47,611 at Lincoln Downs.

The internal revenue service in Providence said Holmes, a cable checker at the Plastic Wire and Cable Corp. in Jewett City, cashed his ticket Monday night and picked up his winnings.

The internal revenue agency said it was on hand to withhold the government's share of the earnings but declined to say what that was.

Nats Scrape Out Thrilling Win

SAN JUAN (CP-AP) — Lethbridge Nationals, Canada's Pan-American Games basketball entry, won a thrilling 60-59 exhibition victory over Puerto Rico's Games team Tuesday night.

Johnny Baez of Puerto Rico missed a foul shot in the last half-minute which would have tied the score. The Canadians kept possession for the final 22 seconds to eke out the victory.

Lacrosse poked its head through the sports calendar Tuesday.

At Vancouver, that city's Mann Cup hopefuls defeated New Westminster, Mann Cup champions, 9-7, in the first of the annual Shrine Cup two-game series.

At Chilliwack, Tommy McVie ended a persistent rumor that he would coach the Inter-City League's newest member by signing as player-coach. His role becomes effective (a) after Nanaimo formally releases him and (b) after Portland Buckaroos, with whom he plays, finish Western Hockey League playoffs.

SECOND APRIL 27
Vancouver and New Westminster finish their Shrine series in New Westminster on April 27.

Gordie Gimple and Bob Marsh scored twice for Vancouver and Bill Barbour, Sid Warrick, Ross McDonald, Sam Penner and Gord Fredrickson got one goal each. Ron Platen got two goals for New Westminster's Mann Cup champions, the others going to Billy Jobb, Paul Parnell, Ken Oddy, Doug Wallsmith and Bill Wilkes.

Barbour, who also had four assists, was thrown out of the game in the fourth quarter when he received misconduct and match misconduct penalties for protesting a minor penalty to Marsh.

Richest Golf Meet Starts Next Year

TEE TOPICS

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Art Donaldson is killing two birds with one stone and that should work out to good advantage for 14-year-old Don Billsborough.

One of Victoria's better young athletes (soccer, baseball, etc.), young Billsborough is Art's protégé and newest caddy. Donaldson made a nice gesture the other day by inviting Billsborough to be his partner in the Good Friday four-ball tournament at Uplands. Don came in on two holes while the professional marked up a one-under-par 69. The 67 gave them a share of low gross honors.

Needless to say, Donaldson was quite pleased. Billsborough, who has been playing golf for only about a year, sports an 11 handicap.

"He's going to be good," says Art. "He was a bit 'stage struck' in the early going," Donaldson added, "otherwise we would have done better."

"Anyway, it's nice to have a caddy of his calibre around. If I run into trouble in the Times Open, I'll pull the bag and let him play..."

Ron MacLeod was a trifle envious of Bill McColl when the latter drew the No. 4 position for the first round of the Times Open.

"They say every draw is fair," Ron said the other day. "That may be so, but give me that No. 4 spot every time. The guy who gets it comes out to the finals every time. Look it up."

I did, and there's some basis for MacLeod's argument. But not every time. In three of the last six tournaments, the golfer who drew the fourth spot came out on top. Chapman MacLeod did it last year; Joe Briggs went all the way in 1957 after drawing No. 4 slot and Laurie Carroll did the same thing in 1958.

"They keep saying the top half of the draw is so tough this year. That's nothing new. The top half is the toughest half almost every year."

MacLeod isn't the only golfer in the field who has expressed a liking for "No. 4." Gordie Jones has been having some trouble with his driver. He used his "baffle" off the tees Sunday and feels it was one of the main reasons he conquered Freddie Painter.

"I wasn't going to take any chances on leaving the fairway. You just don't do that against Freddie... and win. I stuck to my four wood and it worked out very well."

SHORT CHIPS: Annual Empress tournament starts next Monday at Victoria Golf Club... Entry list is close to 220, including ladies... Distaff swingers, who have played Uplands in other years, will also play the Oak Bay course... Lack of clubhouse facilities at Uplands prompted the decision... Among entries received is one from Mike Pyke, the defending champion from Calgary...

Gorge Vale's annual parent-child tournament will be played April 28... Mainland seniors are planning to chart a bus so that means the entries into the Island Seniors' tournament (Colwood May 3) will total almost 100... Harry Leinweber scored a 68 to capture low gross honors in a pre-season event for Cedar Hill members at the week end... Low net was won by Ernie Wheeler, with a 57... Fred Worthington and Wayne Spidel topped the Juniors...

Probers Find 'No Evidence' Of Rigging

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—A special legislative committee reported to the legislature Tuesday that it found "no evidence worthy of belief" to support charges in the Saturday Evening Post that the 1962 Georgia-Alabama football game was rigged.

The committee said it and Alabama Attorney-General Richmond Flowers "have examined every material witness of whom we now have knowledge and who has been available to us. Based upon the information we now have, the committee has concluded that the evidence does not support charges made in the March 23 issues of the Post."

The article charged that former Georgia athletic director Wallace Butts telephoned Bulldog plays to Alabama coach Paul Bear Bryant before the game which Alabama, a heavy favorite, won 35-0.

GOLF SCHOOL By SAM SNEAD

Golfers who try to inject extra power into their swings through excessive body motion usually wind up swaying off the ball. The golf swing is a precise movement, and contact with the ball must be fairly perfect for a good shot. It is logical to state that if a fellow sways away from the target on the backswing, he'll have little chance of swaying exactly the same on the way down and achieving square contact.

As you swing back, have a feeling that your head is anchored and that your knees and hips are twisting to the right. If this is the case, you'll build up power through a coiling of your body on the backswing and be ready to belt the ball a country mile.

ENTICING PRIZE LIST

"The most prize money previously committed to a tournament is the $110,000 for the Cleveland open," he said. "The George S. May world tournament in Chicago had a bigger first prize, $50,000, but the total prize money amounted to only $101,500."

Cacquin said he expected the news of the tournament to be greeted enthusiastically by the touring players.

"It is not only a large first prize, $35,000, but the prize list all down the line is enticing," the PGA executive added. "Naturally, every top player will want to compete—not only for the prize money but for the world-wide prestige."

HASTY ANNOUNCER'S ERROR ...

... ROCKS BRITISH RACING

Bookies Lose Small Fortune

LONDON (AP)—A big racing row rocked Britain today as hundreds of bookmakers tried to recover thousands of pounds they paid out on the wrong horse.

What happened was this: In the Stuntney Maiden Stakes at Newmarket, Perkin Warbeck and Rodolphus were joint favorites at odds of 5 to 2.

Racing fans at the track—and thousands throughout this land where betting shops are legal—backed both horses.

The two crossed the finish line together in a photo finish. But while the judges were deciding which horse won, an announcement went over over the track loudspeakers:

"Perkin Warbeck, the winner, Rodolphus second, Cradle of The Deep third."

A news agency that carries results from the tracks flashed the same news.

For eight mad minutes, the bookies paid out on Perkin Warbeck.

Then, at Newmarket:

"A correction," said the loudspeakers. "Rodolphus won, Perkin Warbeck was second, Cradle of The Deep third."

Pandemonium broke out in the betting shops.

At Doncaster, a bookie

chased a man into the street. The man escaped with winnings collected on Perkin Warbeck.

In hundreds of shops men and women who had thrown away winning tickets on Rodolphus scrambled on hands and knees to find them.

Those who had collected on Perkin Warbeck quickly disappeared.

A spokesman for the Bookmakers Protection Association said: "This has cost our members a small fortune."

Minor Surgery Stops Palmer

LATROPE, Pa. (AP)—Arnold Palmer will miss the Houston Classic golf tournament this week because of work that must be finished on his teeth and a cyst that was removed from under his left eye, his wife said Tuesday night.

"It's nothing serious. They are things kind of left over and he has to have them done. There's no injury or anything."

Mrs. Palmer said Arnold, one of golf's Big Three along with Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player, had a cyst removed in February after the Phoenix Open.

He Lost on 'Sporting Chance'

UCLUELET—A Finnish immigrant, who four months ago spent a life's savings for his own fishing boat, saw it destroyed by fire Tuesday.

Paavo Helenius, 43, was making his first big trip in the 36-foot craft when it burst into flame after an explosion near the engine.

Helenius jumped clear in a life jacket and watched the Sporting Chance sink off Cape Beale. The Port Coquitlam man was rescued by the fish-boat Norfish and is in good condition in West Coast General Hospital with face and hand burns.

His wife Irene said the boat had cost $7,000. It was insured, but not the fishing equipment.

"He was laid off from his job and he felt that if he put his savings into the boat he would at least have steady employment," she said.

DUNCAN—Extensive damage was caused by smoke to the interior of the home of Mrs. William Olson, Cowichan Lake Road, when a fire broke out in the basement of the house early Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Olson, her four children and the pet dog, Bounce, escaped injury.

A quick response by the North Cowichan Fire Department prevented the fire from spreading to other parts of the house.

The blaze is believed to have been started by one of the Olson children who mistook a pool of gasoline for water. The youngster dipped a piece of paper in the fluid and threw it into the furnace. The explosion started the fire.

DUNCAN—A studio night of three one-act plays will be staged by the Duncan Little Theatre at the Duncan Elementary School gymnasium on Friday, April 26.

The program will consist of two plays being entered in the current Central Vancouver Island Drama Festival at Lake Cowichan—"Hands Across the Sea" and "Girls Must Talk."

The third production will be "The Stranger" which was entered in the 1962 festival.

DUNCAN—A Nanaimo dog, Champ, owned by L. Olsen, took top honors at the Cowichan Dog Obedience Training Club trials held here Sunday.

Champ scored 198.5 points to win. He also took the highest scores for out-of-town dogs and novices.

Open trophy was won by Dusty, owned by Mrs. L. Mead. Score was 189 points.

The junior handler prize went to Miss Valerie Weismiller, whose dog Sparkle scored 177. Other qualifying scores were: Novice Mrs. H. D. Bishop with Dunga, 192½; Mrs. M. McCasidill with Jackie, 192; T. Sampson with Spot, 192; Miss Wanita Playle with Kip, 191; Miss A. M. Jennings with Mickey, 189½; Mrs. S. Laplante with Laddie, 188½; C. Clements with Shadow, 186½; G. Prith with Corky, 188; Mrs. H. McHugh with Jacques, 186, and Miss N. Brooke, with Ginch, 176.

Judging the events was Dr. Eric Johnson.

NANAIMO—Mayor Pete Maffeo said Tuesday something should be done to make it easier for tourists to reach Vancouver Island.

He said he is concerned over the difficulty experienced by travellers in getting to Nanaimo from the mainland, especially during peak periods, such as the Easter holiday weekend.

Nanaimo and mainland wharves Sunday afternoon were jammed to capacity with lines full of waiting cars, he said.

The traffic problem was compounded when the Tsawwassen blew an engine gasket and was laid up five hours for repairs.

INFRINGEMENT OF RIGHTS?

Oak Bay Balks on Boat Curbs

A ban on parking boats, trailers and mobile homes on the street end of private driveways could infringe on private rights, Oak Bay council was told Tuesday.

Council was asked by its zoning and planning development committee to consider a bylaw that would keep Oak Bay streets uncluttered and attractive by making owners park extra vehicles to the rear of houses.

"What we are aiming for is openness of streets," zoning chairman Coun. John Watts said.

This was the motive behind the rigid setback controls enforced on building developments, he said.

WASHING MACHINES

"Some people have old washing machines and cars in their driveways permanently," Coun. William Wade observed.

Whether the bylaw proceeds "depends on how much the people want to preserve the amenities of the community as a whole," Mr. Watts said.

"I'm not completely opposed to the idea," Coun. Allan Cox said, "but . . . the difficulty as I see it is that if we are going to do it with boats how are we going to avoid doing it with cars?"

"Obviously, whatever we do will infringe on rights, but governments are faced with that every day. That's what we are here for. The point is not to discriminate."

99% ALL RIGHT

Boats and trailers are part of the amenities of the residential way of life and in 99 per cent of cases there is no objection, Coun. Fred Robinson said.

Reeve George Murdoch said the solicitor should give an opinion on how far such a bylaw would infringe on common rights.

Council asked for a report for its next meeting.

'Divorce Perjury Common'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Private investigator Lloyd S. Britton, 44, was sentenced Tuesday to two years in prison for perjury despite his lawyer's plea that perjury is committed in nine out of 10 divorce cases.

OAK BAY VOTES 'NO' 4 TO 2

Aquarium Proposal Snarled By Parking Congestion Fear

Application to establish an underwater garden aquarium in conjunction with Oak Bay Marina Ltd. snagged on the parking problem Tuesday night at Oak Bay council.

A motion to approve the plan in principle was defeated by a vote of 4-2 after an hour-long discussion in which Charles White, of Saltaire Products Ltd., and marina president Robert Wright took part.

RECOMMENDED

Council's marina committee had approved the plan offered by Saltaire via Oak Bay Marina and sought council approval of a sub-lease that would give the marina the world's first such marine garden, where fish and plant life could be seen in their natural surroundings.

It is still open for the marina firm to re-apply for approval of a lease, despite council's first reaction, Reeve Murdoch said.

Councillors John Watts and William Wade stood alone in moving approval, subject to inspection of plans.

Coun. Alex Hendry was concerned about adequate parking.

ing. He wished to avoid street congestion.

50-60 SPACES

Mr. Wright said a city planner's estimate placed the additional parking needs — outside of marina requirements — would be 50-60 spaces.

He said plans to segregate clientele for the exhibit from those making use of boating and restaurant facilities were already laid.

Engineer Geoffrey White said there would be a maximum of 225 parking spaces, provided the provincial government agrees to an extra 70 feet of foreshore lease.

Mr. Wright said there would be 288 seats in restaurant and coffee bar and there are berths for 440 small boats.

BREAKING FAITH

"This is wrong," Coun. Allan Cox said. "We are breaking faith with the people because we said we were proceeding on a very definite plan. This is a serious departure from it."

He was referring to a plebiscite which gave the marina project the go-ahead, and said parking was an original concern of the marina committee.

He said it was not fair to proceed with considering extra parking without knowing how the original needs would work out.

Council would not be obligated to go on providing parking space, he felt, believing the area was not designed to accommodate large-scale parking.

COMPLAINTS

It would deprive a boat owner or restaurant patron of a parking space if exhibitors filled up the spaces, and then there would be complaints to council, Coun. Cox said.

Reeve George Murdoch said the parking area is public property, open to the person who wished only to admire the scenery or paint a picture as much as boaters.

Besides, council can control it, with meters, if necessary, he said.

FAIR TRIAL

Coun. Watts said he could see no break in faith since the main item in the vote was whether there would be a marina. He said a short-term lease would give a fair trial.

Charles White said the risks were small compared with the benefits to be derived, confident that quick turnover of patrons would solve the problem unaided.

Cigar bands are believed to have first been used in Cuba to protect the fingers of wealthy women who smoked secretly.

SPEAKER at the next meeting of Vancouver Island Section, Chemical Institute of Canada, will be national president Dr. Laurence H. Cragg, of the University of Alberta. The meeting will be held April 24 at 8:30 p.m. at Victoria College. Prior to the meeting, a dinner will be held in his honor at 6:30 p.m. at Princess Mary Restaurant vessel.

MUSEUM, MERRY-GO-ROUND PLANNED

Mattick Wins Zoning Extension

Extension of the commercially-zoned area at the Cordova Bay farm of William Mattick, to permit the development of further amusement and recreational facilities, was approved by Saanich council Tuesday.

Council agreed to further rezone a portion of the farm to permit construction of a picnic area, a moat for small boats, a museum for working models of steam engines and cars, a merry-go-round and maze.

Mr. Mattick told council he hoped to get the projects underway soon.

PLANNER OPPOSED

The application was strongly opposed by town planner Tony Parr on the grounds that it would permit further commercial development along Cordova Bay Road towards the residential area and opposite the elementary school.

Mr. Parr stressed that the planning department is not opposed to any further commercial development on the farm.

ward into a residential area and opposite a school," he said. "What you are doing is extending a fair into a residential rather than stretching south-area."

... Bigoted View of One Man

By IAIN HUNTER

Accusations by Greater Victoria school superintendent John Gough levelled against the annual Miss Victoria contest has raised the wrath of the local Junior Chamber of Commerce which sponsors the contest.

Mr. Gough, in a report to the school board, Tuesday night condemned the contest as "an exploitation of youth" and "contrary to the proper tenets of education" set up by the provincial department.

Today Jaycee president Eric Charman termed the report "the bigoted view of one man."

WINS SUPPORT

He was supported by former Miss Victoria and winner of the 1961 Miss Canada contest Nina Holden, and by other officials of the local pageant.

The board agreed to go on record as "looking with disfavor" on the contest when Jaycees requested to be allowed to go into local schools with an appeal for contestants.

The request was rejected flatly by Mr. Gough.

In his report he said that "in spite of assertions to the contrary, this contest is based on physical charm, and the contestants are usually involved in a bathing beauty contest."

"The winners are surrounded by adulation which is not deserved praise."

The report says such competitions "create a false sense of values" among contestants and student bodies, endangers the winner's personality by "cheeseecake" pictures, publicity, gifts, and "lavish holiday trips."

'NO REAL INTEREST'

"It should be noted, too, that participating businesses have no real interest in the contestant beyond her usefulness in advertising their products."

Chairman of the board, Mrs. Frances Thompson, pointed out that one winner of the contest, Vivi Peterson, left high school "because of it."

She was joined by other board members who said it wasted school time and played havoc with grades in many cases.

'IGNORANCE'

Mr. Charman said that the statement to the effect that the contest was based on physical charm was made "out of ignorance."

This was supported by Nina Holden in a telephone interview from Vancouver. She said that the contest was a scholarship foundation to begin with, and 60 per cent of the points were based on talent and education.

"Only 15 to 20 per cent of the marks are for beauty," she said, "10 for the face and five for figure."

She said the idea that the contest interfered with studies was "nonsense."

"They aren't looking for the most beautiful girl in the world in these contests,"

Miss Holden said, "they want the typical Canadian girl."

She said the contest did not give her "any false sense of values" but did give her more confidence and "an experience which I will always be grateful for."

'NOT ONE GIRL'

Mrs. Mary Rawnsley, who has been engaged as chaperone and judge in the contest for the past nine years, said "there is not one girl that I know of who has had to leave school" because of the Miss Victoria contest.

Mr. Charman said the support for the contest shown by local businessmen in the past proved that Mr. Gough was alone in his criticism.

"The queen is our gift to the city," he explained.

However, one former beauty queen, Synnove Petersen, was not so sure the contest is completely harmless.

"For the wrong kind of girl it could do a great deal of harm," she said. "If she doesn't take it the right way it could go to her head."

SYNNOVE PETERSEN "could be harmful."

Old Buildings Can't Be Used For Precinct

'No Practical Way' Of Salvaging Them

Ald. A. W. Toome today said a final check of all possibilities showed there was no practical way of salvaging private buildings scheduled to come down in the civic precinct.

The chairman of Centennial Victoria Square committee, he said the survey was made by architects to make doubly sure that existing buildings could not be used for the proposed senior citizens recreation centre before final plans are drawn.

"We decided that it is impractical and not feasible economically to convert any of the buildings instead of building a new one," he said.

Still under study is the question of whether a central heating plant or individual heating services would be most economical for buildings in the precinct project.

Anybody Seen Triple Petals On Dogwoods?

Victorians were quick to respond Tuesday to an appeal by horticulturist Jack Crossley for information on the whereabouts of odd flowering dogwood trees.

Mr. Crossley, who is in charge of ornamental tree research at the Dominion Experimental Farm, Sault Ste. Marie, said today he was deluged with telephone calls to tell him where he can locate dogwood trees which bloom twice a year.

"I have now all the trees I want of this variety," he said. But he added, he was still looking for dogwoods sporting double or triple petalled flowers.

"That would be a real find," he said. "If anyone knows of such a tree please phone Granite 5-2131."

Mr. Crossley is selecting special strains of dogwood for propagation and research.

2-Chance Harry Must Pay $100 For Junk Yard

Veteran junk dealer Harry Haigh, who was given two chances by magistrate William Ostler to clean up lumber and other refuse on his property at 1586 Rockland, was fined for failing to do so when he appeared in city police court today.

He was fined $100 and was bound over in his own recognizance on a six-month bond for $200, after pleading guilty to a charge of keeping an unlicensed junkyard.

He had appeared in court April 1 and April 9 on the charge, but had been remanded for an opportunity to clean up the property to the satisfaction of city building inspectors.

Donations Needed For Saturday's Free Food Stall

An appeal for donations of food for the Free Food Stall was made today by Mrs. E. E. Harper, convener.

She is faced with a serious shortage of food needed to look after more than 275 persons who will be calling at the stall Saturday noon.

"Unless food donations are forthcoming, I'm afraid many families may have to go without," she said. "I haven't yet received enough food for a car to pick up."

Contributors are asked to contact Mrs. Harper at GR 4-1750. She will make arrangements to pick up donations of food.

Settlements Within Week Seen With Civic Unions

Intensive negotiating sessions between City Hall and two civic unions probably will produce settlements within the week, one of the participants speculated today.

The bargaining involves a 4½ per cent wage increase and 35-hour work week requested by the unions.

He referred to a violent reaction against union contract requests that year.

Oak Bay Reeve George Murdoch agreed with Mr. Pearlman in principle: "That's the only way to do it—negotiate on an area basis."

He did not wish to comment further as Oak Bay negotiations are not yet settled.

The reeve proposed a labor court to settle disputes, with a judge appointed by the province. This would result in "far more impartial decisions than we get from arbitration boards," he said.

Mr. Pearlman mentioned composition of conciliation boards, which for police and firemen have the effect of arbitration because their decisions are binding.

He was critical of outsiders acting as chairmen and urged that in future the city "make appropriate representation to the department of labor that the chairman come from the Victoria area."

There is a "determined effort (in negotiations) to tie Victoria in with Vancouver and I don't think the economies are the same at all," Mr. Pearlman commented today.

Excited Guides Flit Among Totem Poles

The only straight faces at Thunderbird Park this morning were on the totem poles. The others—belonging to 54 Girl Guides from throughout British Columbia—were animated and excited.

The report says such competitions "create a false sense of values" among contestants and student bodies, endangers the winner's personality by "cheeseecake" pictures, publicity, gifts, and "lavish holiday trips."

"It should be noted, too, that participating businesses have no real interest in the contestant beyond her usefulness in advertising their products."

LABOR OFFICIAL REPLIES TO LAWYER'S PLEA FOR AREA-WIDE NEGOTIATIONS

Amalgamation Called Best Answer to Balkanized Municipal Pay Talks

A city lawyer's plea for area-wide municipal wage negotiations would be a point covered by the amalgamation of Greater Victoria, a labor spokesman said today.

Victoria Labor Council secretary A. W. Toome—also an alderman—was replying to a report made to Mayor R. B. Wilson by Edwin E. Pearlman, the city's chief negotiator in police, firemen and municipal staff contract matters.

Unless the municipalities work together to establish "reasonable wages and working conditions," they will continue to be faced with costs completely unrelated to the economy of the area, Mr. Pearlman said.

There was "no justification" for wage increases to police and firemen awarded this year by binding conciliation, the lawyer said.

"If the present loose method of negotiation within the area continues, the situation will probably deteriorate and become even less related to actual conditions in this city and area," Mr. Pearlman reported.

Mr. Toome said looking at the situation in perspective, the suggestion is nearly what the city proposed under amalgamation. But he could not see how an effective joint system of negotiation could be brought about as long as there are separate jurisdictions.

"The fault lies in negotiations, rather than in arbitration findings," Mr. Toome said. "There should be real, earnest negotiations (for police and firemen, for example), rather than the feeling that the whole thing will be wrapped up by arbitration."

There is an aloofness in negotiations, and not enough bargaining in good faith, Mr. Toome said. Bargaining sessions should be carried on in the same spirit as exists with private industry.

Mr. Toome said it was difficult to separate his thinking on this matter as alderman and labor representative, "but perhaps they shouldn't be separated. There are good points and faults on both sides."

A police union spokesman was reluctant to comment on Mr. Pearlman's suggestions. "He's entitled to his opinions," said Lorne Shandley. "We refuse to get into any type of controversy like in 1960—two solid weeks of abuse."

There are highly industrialized, high-wage areas that still pay police and firemen less than Victoria," he said.

He said "it seems completely beyond belief but nevertheless it is a fact" that Victoria pays police and firemen more than any other Canadian city except Vancouver and its environs.

There, the rates are $8 a month higher than in Victoria.

This results in $488 a month for first class police and firemen here.

"When you think of the size of Victoria, primarily residential and not industrial, paying a higher rate than Montreal, with all its waterfrontage which is always considered a fire hazard . . . take a city like Sudbury, with as tough a bunch of men as you'll find anywhere, Victoria seems out of line," Mr. Pearlman said.

He said: "I don't think Victoria police and firemen should not get a high wage as long as they deserve it. Victoria looks after its police and firemen exceptionally well."

Archer's Job Completed By Month End

George Archer today said he likely will wind up his report on Greater Victoria police services by the end of this month.

"My second report on the Victoria force is now in the hands of the deputy attorney-general and I'm working on the last phase of the survey," the former Vancouver police chief and RCMP official said.

He added that he was completing interviews of Oak Bay policemen today and Thursday would check the Central Saanich operations. The Saanich survey is finished and next week Mr. Archer will look into Esquimalt and Colwood area services.

"I expect to have my complete report made by the end of the month," Mr. Archer said.

The report will take the form of separate sections on each department with a general section on the overall situation.

WELCOMES GRANT

In answer to questions, Mr. Archer welcomed this week's announcement of a $3,000 provincial grant to help defray expenses of "outside" municipal police officers sent to attend courses at the Vancouver police academy.

"This is a very significant move on the part of the provincial government and one I most heartily applaud," said Mr. Archer.

Although announced only this week by the Vancouver force, the provincial grant was made last year, he said.

Asked if the grant would have any impact on his report, Mr. Archer said:

"It is consistent with my thinking in regard to training of municipal police forces. It is an urgent need."

Settlements Within Week Seen With Civic Unions

Intensive negotiating sessions between City Hall and two civic unions probably will produce settlements within the week, one of the participants speculated today.

The bargaining involves a 4½ per cent wage increase and 35-hour work week requested by the unions.

He referred to a violent reaction against union contract requests that year.

Oak Bay Reeve George Murdoch agreed with Mr. Pearlman in principle: "That's the only way to do it—negotiate on an area basis."

He did not wish to comment further as Oak Bay negotiations are not yet settled.

The reeve proposed a labor court to settle disputes, with a judge appointed by the province. This would result in "far more impartial decisions than we get from arbitration boards," he said.

Mr. Pearlman mentioned composition of conciliation boards, which for police and firemen have the effect of arbitration because their decisions are binding.

He was critical of outsiders acting as chairmen and urged that in future the city "make appropriate representation to the department of labor that the chairman come from the Victoria area."

There is a "determined effort (in negotiations) to tie Victoria in with Vancouver and I don't think the economies are the same at all," Mr. Pearlman commented today.

Examinations Soon Over, Graduation to Follow

By PENNY SAVER

Many young people only see springtime in tones of black and white. Their eyes are glued to the printed page and not the hosts of golden daffodils.

Yes, springtime is exam time and it is only fair that each diligent student should receive a reward for their efforts.

For the young man, who may be leaving home after graduation, a writing case may be a gentle reminder to send a note back home occasionally.

Writing cases that are made to fit the standard-size pad range between $6.95 for the note-pad size and $12.95 for the extra large.

A utility kit is a must for every young man and these range from $4.95 for a perfectly plain leather kit with zipper closing to $16 for a case fitted with hairbrushes and manicure set.

If the man in question already owns a kit perhaps all he needs is a good hairbrush in a leather case. A brush of pure pig's bristle is $6.95 or $4.95 will buy one of nylon.

Leather portfolios with zipper closing and leather handles are $7.95. Without handles they are only $4.95.

And of course a set of luggage has long been the standard gift for both men and women. For girls in particular a train case is a good starter. These are available for as little as $10.95 or as much as $29.95.

For girls who are staying in the academic world the large carry-alls are proving to be the most popular campus bags. They are large enough and strong enough to carry books, lunch and plastic raincoat. Also the strap can be lengthened and made into a shoulder strap. Prices start at $6.95 for an unlined bag, but the average price is $12.95.

If you are looking for something a little more romantic you may like to see the new line of compacts finished in soft Italian leather in Florentine design. Price is $6.50.

French purses or satin, brocade or beaded evening bags are just a few more items you can find in this store for under 10 dollars.

To find out the name of the store, phone Penny at 382-3131.

DEAR ABBY...

Reverse Psychology!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The husband with the perfume on his shoulder reminded me of something. A few years ago I was riding in the rear of an elevator when three men got in. One man in a light gray suit was standing directly in front of me when his friend, in a playful gesture (not seeing me), shoved him back. He left with a perfect imprint of my lips right between his shoulder blades. I wonder what his wife thought when he got home?

DEAR ABBY: We don't mean to interfere in anyone else's business, but we have a neighbor who has a little girl two-and-a-half years old. We don't think she treats this little girl right. She doesn't walk or talk, and the mother keeps her strapped in a chair all day long. The poor angel is so bitter and frustrated she sometimes bites herself until she bleeds. The mother says the little girl is "bad." But how can she be "bad" when she is strapped in a chair all day long? What do you suggest?

DEAR MRS. G.: What better proof could a wife want that her husband wouldn't even turn around to LOOK at another woman?

NO NAME PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: The mother should be reported to the authorities. If you have no local family and children service, ask a law enforcement officer where to report this.

Stop worrying. Write to Abby. For a personal reply enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Anthony Blotta

Spelling success for summer '63 in no uncertain fashion terms, this wonderful easy-to-wear dress was originally shown in white silk linen with a full length margin of navy grosgrain to highlight its buttoned front opening. Cool and collarless, the bodice curves closely over the shoulder tip in the most flattering approach to sleevelessness. The gently swaying skirt concentrates its graceful flare at the side front and back, then falls in a straight and slender line over the hips. Designer Anthony Blotta clasps the waistline with a matching contour belt that fastens under the double loop ribbon bow. Choose shantung, linen, novelty cottons, sharkskin, silk surah or synthetic blends. From these corresponding body measurements select the size best for you. WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Can She Keep Good Figure Now That She Is a Mother?

I have just been reading a letter from a young mother who is more than a bit concerned about the possibility of losing her figure.

"Before pregnancy," she writes, "I had a beautiful figure, admired by my husband and my friends. I had been complimented frequently about my figure, but now I wonder if I'm about to lose it."

My doctor tells me that I can't expect to keep my girlish figure any longer, now that I am a mother. This doesn't seem quite right to me.

"It is true that many women do lose their figures when they have children. But I have a number of friends of my own age and older who, with three, four and even five or six children, are as attractive as the day of their marriage. Can you give me any advice on this problem?"

The assumption that you must lose your good figure simply because you have a child is ridiculous. Many years ago I consulted one of New York City's leading obstetricians. This man was not only an expert in medicine but in human relationships as well and took a special interest in the repercussions of figure and personal attractiveness on personality and happiness.

As he explained at the time, "The only reasons for loss of figure are lack of information and laziness. Bearing children does not even cause a permanent spread in the bony structure of the body."

But let's face the probable fact that you ate more than you needed during pregnancy, and following delivery continued in your habit of over-eating. All you need do is exercise a little self-control in this field; count calories, keeping your calories down to the allowable for one who needs to lose weight, and do a few abdominal firming exercises daily.

Don't despair. Just get busy, and above all, don't blame a matronly figure on your unsuspecting offspring!

Two warnings are in order: 1) As conditions of delivery vary in individuals, be certain that exercise is safe for you. 2) If you are nursing your baby, be sure and wait until the nursing period is over before serious dieting.

If you wish to have my leaflet, "Care During and After Pregnancy," send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet No. 21 to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Exchange Vows

Calla lilies decorated Grace Lutheran Church when Denise Georgina Nicholson, daughter of Mrs. Violet Nicholson, 607 Linden Ave., exchanged vows with Alexander Henry Ross, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex C. Ross, 467 Fraser Street.

Rev. W. Williams heard the marriage vows and Purcell's "Trumpet Voltaire" was played by John Bergbusch.

Iridescent bead embroidery highlighted the full skirt of the bride's floor-length gown of silk sheer. Basque bodice featured scooped neckline and lily point sleeves. Silk illusion veil misted from a cap of seed pearls. Yellow tulips and Tropicana roses were in her cascade bouquet. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Alex Nicholson.

Matron of honor, Mrs. V. Novak and bridesmaid, Miss Barbara Nipp wore bell-skirted gowns of emerald green organza over taffeta and white accessories. They wore pearls, gifts of the bride and carried bouquets of yellow and white narcissi.

William Walker was best man. Ushers were Jim and Robbie Ross.

Spring flowers decorated Holyrood House for the reception and R. E. Fisher proposed the toast.

For a going-away outfit the bride chose a yellow wool suit, white organza hat, black patent leather accessories and gardenia corsage.

On return from a honeymoon up-island the newlyweds are now living at 1224 Richardson Street.

Uprising May 1?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — an uprising against Cuba's Fidel Castro is scheduled for May 1, a leader of Cuban exiles said Tuesday. Jose Norman, who says he revealed the location of Russian missiles in Cuba two days prior to President Kennedy's announcement, said the uprising would be planned and executed exclusively by Cubans.

'City Hall Needed Flushing'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mail carrier Noel Volz, 32, broke into city hall Sunday and turned on firehoses on all four floors.

In half an hour he had created rivers running up to four inches deep and had sent water cascading down an elevator shaft to the basement from the fourth floor, police said.

In addition, he made shambles of a few restrooms, broke a dozen windows, overturned lobby displays and stripped trees in the city hall plaza and threw the limbs into the fountain pool.

It took four policemen to make the arrest.

Volz said he chose Easter Sunday because "if anything, it's the proper time. I've been wanting to do this for a long time. I thought city hall needed a flushing out."

He was booked on charges of suspicion of burglary, resisting arrest, assaulting a police officer and malicious mischief.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy. Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes. The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammett Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Gary Gettner, 10, Crawford, Neb., for his question:

What is Lemur?

Way out in the tropical Indian Ocean is the island of Madagascar where it is Halloween every night of the year. The ghostly prowlers are furry lemurs that haunt the rustling thickets of bamboo and the lofty branches of the jungle trees. If you stroll outdoors at night without knowing what to expect, the lemurs would scare you home in a hurry.

The furry lemurs remind you of monkeys and squirrels, foxes and house cats—but they are classed in their very own animal family, Lemuridae. We know of 90 species of lemur, and 50 of them enjoy life on the warm, forested island of Madagascar. They are night-prowling, tree-dwellers ranging in size from those of a house cat to a small poodle dog.

A lemur gazes hazily at the daytime world from a pair of huge, bright eyes. His foxy face wears a puzzled expression, and his pointed nose is set off by a set of stiff whiskers. He has hands like a monkey, and you might think that his long tail can help him swing monkey-fashion through the trees. But this is not so. The lemur cannot use his tail for grasping and clasping as some monkeys can. What's more, a lemur's tail may be bushy and striped like the tail of a raccoon.

Feeds on Nuts and Fruits

As a rule, the gentle creature feeds on nuts and fruit—though some of his cousins eat insects, birds' and birds' eggs. Almost always he dozes through the tropical day. He may sleep with his foxy head tucked under his furry arm and his bushy tail curled around his neck.

The lemur awakes when the sun dips down from the sky. He stretches his arms while dozens of his friends and relatives are also preparing for the fun. Each type of lemur has his own cry—and with a yip or a howl, a moan, a groan or a piercing shriek, off they swoop into the night.

When the lemur does not cry out, the woods of Madagascar are even more eerie. There are scary rustlings in the branches. Suddenly the night traveller is staring straight into a ghostly face set with a pair of dark, deep-set ghostly eyes. Sometimes a lemur will drop from a tree-top with a wild howl and stand in the pathway, waving his ghostly arms.

The young lemur is always an only child, for his mother has only one baby at a time. She feeds him on mother's milk and cherishes him with tender care. Wherever she goes, he goes with her. He spreads out his arms and legs and clings to mama's furry coat with his fingers and toes. He may cling to her back or to the warm fur on her chest. In some cases, the papa lemur helps bring up and educate the growing lemur.

Andy sends a 14-inch globe to Ronnie Melton, age 12, of Gastonia, N.C., for his question:

What are tar pits?

A tar pit is a natural deposit of dark, tarry tar or asphalt. There are likely to be central puddles where the tar is soft and sticky, and the areas around the edges of the deposit may be layers of dry and hardened asphalt. The tar pit forms where petroleum is present in the rocks near the surface of the earth.

Some of the chemicals of petroleum are volatile and tend to evaporate in the open air. This happens when the oil oozes out from cracks in the ground. As the lighter chemicals evaporate, the heavier, tacky materials in the petroleum are left behind as puddles of tar.

Danish 12-Mile Limit Difficult to Enforce

COPENHAGEN (Reuters) — Denmark is gravely worried new fishery limits, due to be extended to 12 from three miles June 1, along Greenland's 25,000-mile coastline.

Denmark does not have enough ships to police the enlarged area and the three available navy cutters lack the required radar and navigational equipment to detect "poachers."

Rear-Admiral J. T. S. Munter, the top Danish naval officer in Greenland, says enforcement of the new limit is "problematical."

The inspection problem was one of the main factors which caused the government to delay the new limits two months. The 12-mile limit was originally planned for April 1.

For a seven-year period, until 1970, trawlers from nations with "historic rights" to fish in Greenland waters will be allowed to fish the six- to 12-mile zone. These nations, according to a bill put before the Danish parliament recently, include Britain, France, West Germany, Spain, Portugal, Norway and Iceland.

Denmark's move to widen the limits has been welcomed by Greenland which depends mainly on fisheries for its income.

Well-equipped foreign vessels at present take the major share of the total catch in Greenland waters. While Greenlanders brought home about 45,000 tons of fish in 1961, the foreign ships caught 414,000 tons.

They want to get rid of a top-heavy army of supervisors, consultants, superintendents, directors of instruction and inspectors.

Delegates to the annual convention of the B.C. Teachers' Federation Tuesday almost unanimously adopted a Surrey teachers' resolution asking for an investigation into supervisory appointments "with a view to eliminating those which are not justified or which are adverse in their consequences."

"In the ideal educational system teachers need no supervision whatever," said Sam McCaskie of Surrey.

"If a doctor is performing an operation does he want to see someone else standing behind him ready to pull the scalpel out of his hand if he makes a mistake? No, he's in a position of trust."

West Vancouver teacher Ernie Addicot said "no other profession has this... why should teachers be humiliated?"

Sandra Frisby of Vancouver dissented, saying, "I'm a new, young teacher and I need all the help and supervision I can get."

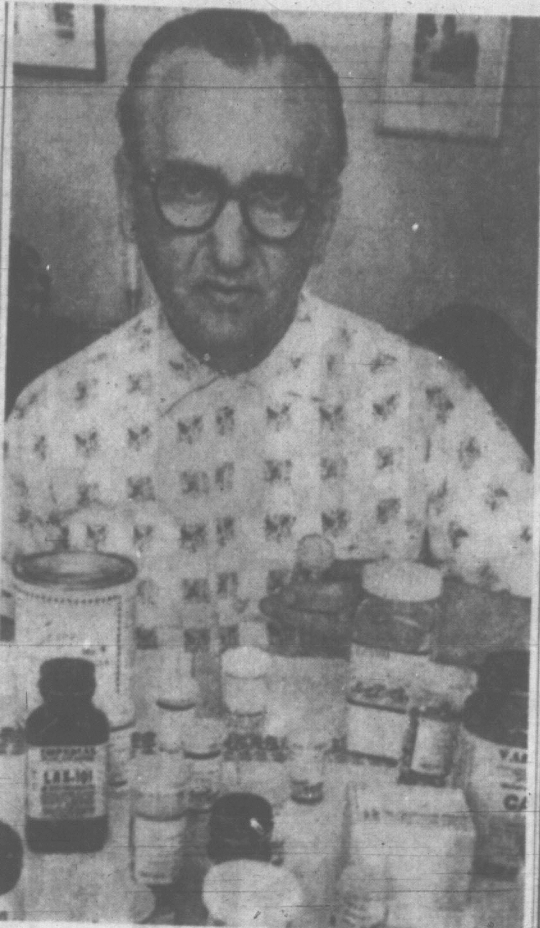

TEACHERS ASK HOLIDAY IN FEBRUARY

WEST-VANCOUVER (CP)—West Vancouver teachers want a new province-wide school holiday of two days in February.

A resolution urging a new midwinter vacation will be placed before 1,300 delegates to the B.C. Teachers' Federation annual convention today.

It is essential, the West Vancouver teachers say, because there now is no school holiday in "the darkest part of the year."

The resolution said that after such a break a student would set out "with renewed vigor and a dizzle in him which would carry him through at a fast clip to the end of the term."

HICCUPPING SESSION started for Arthur Gaschler, 53, of Denver, on Aug. 8, 1961, and 20 months later he is still suffering with the affliction. He has visited 57 doctors and spent $8,000 in attempts to find cure. He has tried such cures as chewing cork, blowing and breathing in a paper bag and neck and throat massaging. (AP Wirephoto.)

Topaz Park Too Small, Says Warren

City parks administrator W. H. Warren said Topaz Park would have to be enlarged with purchase of private property before it could be developed into a stadium park rivaling Royal Athletic.

He was reporting on a city council request for plans and cost estimates on a proposal that Topaz be developed as the area's main stadium park.

He said sections of the park sited off to provide the Rose Street extension now running through the west side of the park to service the Mayfair Shopping Plaza made it too small.

The natural amphitheatre contours also were being disturbed by dumping of fill.

Mr. Warren, who recommended against the proposal, was to make a written report to the next council meeting.

Hilton Hotel Towers Over London

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain's tallest, most dazzling and most controversial hotel—the £8,000,000 ($24,000,000) London Hilton—officially opens for business today.

Towering 31 storeys high over London's most exclusive residential area, the hotel will get an official government accolade when it is opened by Treasury Chief Reginald Maudling.

The hotel rises 300 feet above swanky Park Lane and Hyde Park.

Although objections were raised in Parliament that the hotel would invade the privacy of the Queen in nearby Buckingham Palace, visitors can leave their binoculars and telephoto lenses at home.

The Queen now walks in more secluded parts of the gardens and it is impossible to see in the palace windows.

GIRL CASHIER MAULED IN VANCOUVER HOLDUP

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mrs. Gwen Hamel, 31-year-old chief cashier for a car company, Tuesday lost a bank deposit bag containing $700 in cash and $20,000 in cheques to a gunman—but she put up a good fight.

The bandit, who massed two other bags, accosted her as she sat trying to start her car to take the money to the bank.

Said a company official: "It was obvious her car had been tampered with because it would not start."

Mrs. Hamel's face was bruised and scratched in the struggle.

Tenders Soon On Villa Job

Final steps to launch construction of 16 additional units to Kiwanis Villa at Cook and Lang Streets will be taken this week.

As soon as minor changes in plans are discussed with architect Charles Craig, specifications will be prepared and tenders called.

Bill Lyle, president of Kiwanis Village Society, said today he hoped the units will be ready for tenants by early fall.

Navy Draws Bead On Cost-Cutters

By PETE LOUDON

A proposal for replacement of 16,000 servicemen by civilian workers was torpedoed by the navy today.

A spokesman for Esquimalt naval establishment and two retired admirals rejected the newest cost-cutting recommendation of the Glassco Royal Commission.

The commission said at Ottawa Tuesday that nearly half of Canada's armed forces are engaged in support of non-combat activities.

SAVE $30 MILLION

If civilians took over 16,000 of these 60,000 jobs, the savings would amount to $30 million annually, it stated.

A naval spokesman for the 5,000-man Pacific Command of the RCN said he couldn't speak for the army or air force.

"But we already employ civilians in every possible capacity," he said.

All motor transport drivers and harbor craft crews are civilian. So are telephone operators, many administration personnel and all the naval dockyard maintenance people, he added.

ALL COMBATANTS

Two retired admirals doubled admirably to action stations: Rear Admiral E. P. Tisdall, 1560 Mount Douglas Cross Road, vice-chief of naval staff until his retirement about two years ago, said:

"Every man who joins the navy joins for sea duty. None are recruited for shore duty. "It is improper to say any of them are non-combatants."

Admiral Tisdall said about 50 per cent of RCN personnel are aboard ship, ready for combat. And the bulk of those based ashore are taking courses or serving in instructional or administrative work on a non-permanent basis, but must also expect eventual sea duty.

SOME AT OTTAWA

"There may be some personnel at Ottawa who could be replaced by civilians," he added.

Rear Admiral J. C. Hibbard, a former flag officer, Pacific Coast, stated:

"My first reaction is that a navy with 50 per cent of its personnel afloat in combat-ready ships is most commendable. I know of no country with a higher percentage in ships."

"To consider reducing the number ashore might not necessarily lead to greater efficiency."

Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtele (a former commander), was asked whether more civilians in the naval service might be beneficial to the community.

Would it mean more long-term family settlement, more jobs for women, less early retirement?

NOT TOO MANY

"That could be so, but not too many could be replaced by civilian workers," he thought and the overall effect would make little change to the community, he said.

And he thought that a changeover could mean some jobs would disappear — there wouldn't be as many civilians on the payroll as there are naval personnel now, perhaps, Reeve Wurtele added.

The navy supporters also pointed out that the Glassco report itself shows that the navy has only 20 per cent of its headquarters staff in uniform compared to over 50 per cent each in the army and air force.

was indeed a puff-ball that exploded."

Mr. Branca drew attention to Mr. Holzworth's evidence that he lost $200,000 on Project 819 and that he was out to recover it, and that he expected to get some money out of the highways department.

He said that Mr. Holzworth could only have had two motives in making his graft charges: blackmail or to force an inquiry which he would use as an examination for discovery in a future lawsuit to recover money.

Mr. Branca suggested "he thought he was going to blackmail the minister — in what other manner could he get money from the minister?"

ALLEGATIONS

The main Holzworth allegations were these:

That the contractor on 819 was paid $135,000 for work never done; that contractors paid Mrs. Florence Gresty $350 a month while she was organist in Mr. Gagliardi's Kamloops church.

Mr. Branca first dealt with Mrs. Gresty.

She testified she never played the organ and never received the money — in fact, she did not know how to play the organ.

Even Mr. Holzworth had been unable to substantiate the charge.

Three other witnesses who had attended a meeting on the project at which the decision was allegedly made to pay her also denied knowing anything about it.

"If you believe them as I do then Holzworth is a plain, simple liar," Mr. Branca said.

"If he is lying in this plain and simple incident I am going to ask you to come to the conclusion that he has not told the truth in anything else."

Next Mr. Branca dealt with the Holzworth charge that Mr. Gagliardi prevailed upon contractor Clyde W. Thornton to pay off a mortgage debt of

HONEST DEBT

Mr. Branca said that it was departmental comptroller A. E. Rhodes, not Mr. Gagliardi, who suggested Mr. Thornton pay the debt.

"This was an honest debt," Mr. Branca said.

He said that despite several checks, the highways department had been unable to prove Mr. Gresty was involved while a government employee with subcontractors on Project 819.

The next Holzworth charge was that figures were altered on progress estimates of Project 819 to give the contractors an extra $135,000.

Mr. Branca said that departmental engineers and federal engineer Bruce G. Harvey all testified that there was nothing wrong in the alterations.

"The minister has nothing to do with the estimates," he added.

MORE EQUIPMENT

It was "quite simple" to see why the estimates were changed to allow for more work — there was more equipment on the job to do it.

A charge by Mr. Holzworth that the provincial engineer on the spot, Eric H. Barclay, refused to approve the changes was "incredible," Mr. Branca said.

Although Mr. Holzworth didn't raise the point, Opposition members of the inquiry had brought out evidence that two carpenters on the payroll of the contractor on Project 819 worked on Mr. Gagliardi's church at Kamloops.

Mr. Gagliardi testified they were "donated."

Mr. Branca said the government paid the contractor only for the amount of rock moved on the road project.

"Can you see anything wrong in a company that is being paid by production of a unit and which has a contract with the government in contributing manpower material or otherwise to the building of a church?"

FULFILL APPEAL

Mr. Gagliardi had also testified he appealed from his pulp for volunteer labor.

"Every time a church is built an appeal is made by the pastor to his flock," Mr. Branca declared.

The whole matter appeared in the press in 1959, he said.

"Why did we have to drag this thing out again? He said he hoped that after the inquiry the whole issue 'will have been cremated once and for good.'"

Mr. Branca complained that newspaper headlines during the inquiry had damaged the character of persons involved.

He suggested in future such meetings might be held in camera.

However the highways minister and all his officials had "exuded truth, honesty and integrity."

"Every credible witness that has come before you... has told you there was no preferential treatment — that there were no favors at all and no money exchanged."

He said the inquiry had no alternative but to acquit not only the minister of highways, but all his officials of any wrong doing.

gains all across Canada. In Quebec, the popularity of this party is greater than ever and indicates a bright future," the statement said.

"This incident regarding the six members-elect gave us the chance to see by the reactions of the people how the Liberal party is held in contempt by the Canadian people."

Tuesday party spokesmen said they had no intention of expelling from their ranks the six Quebec MPs, nor of penalizing them.

"We have perfect unity in our party and it will be made clear when our statement is published," one said.

Mr. Thompson and Dr. Guy Marcoux, member for Quebec-Montmorency, have both criticized the six for sending their statement to the governor-general Friday without consulting party leaders. Both said they heard reports that Liberal agents were offering "handsome remuneration" to any Social Credit MP who would support the Pearson government.

This was denied by Real Caouette, Social Credit deputy leader, and by several Liberal spokesmen.

Not all those coming out of the caucus spoke of unity. David E. Hartman of Toronto, unsuccessful candidate in Peterborough in the last election, told reporters there is "a struggle for power" in Social Credit ranks between Premier Manning and Mr. Caouette.

"You can quote me. Manning wants to dump Caouette," Mr. Hartman said. Mr. Thompson is a puppet of Premier Manning. The party should choose a new national leader and Mr. Manning should restrict himself to provincial affairs, he added.

Mr. Caouette Tuesday repeated his criticism of Mr. Thompson for bypassing him when the national leader asked Dr. Marcoux to investigate the circumstances of the surprise statement by the six.

He said he could not do this. Then he was asked if he had recommended that the Governor-General call on Mr. Pearson to form a government.

"There is no necessity of any indication in that regard," he smiled. "Three Social Credit members have determined to give their votes to Mr. Pearson to give and provide him with a majority."

(At about the same time as Mr. Diefenbaker was referring to the three Socreds, a caucus of Quebec Socred MPs issued a statement declaring that no Socreds, including the three mentioned by Mr. Diefenbaker, were giving their vote to Mr. Pearson.)

Mr. Diefenbaker said he found Governor-General Vanier "in excellent good humor." He said he did not mean any play of words in saying that.

The prime minister also was asked what led him to establish 12 noon next Monday as the effective time for his resignation.

"I have nothing to add," he said.

His resignation, in effect, is a post-dated resignation. When he was asked by this correspondent Tuesday if he intended to "submit such a resignation," he asked what the question implied. He was told that it was assumed he would be seeing the Governor-General to resign.

Such an assumption, he declared Tuesday, was not well founded. However, today he tendered a post-dated resignation.

Exile 'Paper' To Be Bared

NEW YORK (UPI)—Cuban exile sources said today the Cuban Revolutionary Council will defy Washington pressure and make public a 10,000-word Cuban "white paper" described as "embarrassing" to the Kennedy administration.

The 23-page document, a copy of which was given Washington last April 5, will be made public at an open meeting of the council in Miami Thursday night, the sources said.

Exile leaders said the Kennedy administration threatened to deny administration threatened council President Jose Miro Cardona with immediate deportation if the document is made public, and also said no council member ever would be received in Washington again.

VICTORIA MAN'S TRIAL UNAFFECTED BY DEATH

VANCOUVER (CP)—Court officials said today that the death of a Crown witness will not affect the trial of a man charged with possessing bond coupons stolen from a St. Catharines, Ont., bank.

A spokesman said another executive of Premier Trust Company, St. Catharines, can be brought here to replace witness William Dales, 57.

Mr. Dales, manager of the firm, was swept to his death Monday over Horseshoe Falls at Niagara, Ont.

David Wilson, 32, of Victoria, is charged with possession of coupons from part of the $837,000 in bonds stolen from Premier Trust in 1959.

At Wilson's preliminary hearing, Dales identified coupons seized in Vancouver and told how his company's vault had been drilled open.

Mayor, Chiefs Praise Police Grant

Mayor R. B. Wilson and local police chiefs Monday praised an announcement that the province has made a $5,000 grant to help pay for training of civic policemen at the Vancouver police training academy.

Vancouver Police Chief Ralph Booth said the grant would cover the $7 per day tuition charges made for policemen from Victoria, Oak Bay, Delta, Matsqui and West Vancouver scheduled to take courses at the academy.

"While metro policing is no closer, steps are being taken for more uniform training and Oak Bay Police Chief Robert Smith said the grant "cuts the bill in half" for sending a man to the mainland academy because only living expenses now have to be covered.

He said his department plans to send a man to Vancouver for a five-day course on personnel supervision.

The Victoria department will send Insp. Ray Maitland and Insp. Brooke Douglass for courses at the academy this month.

government by the northern inhabitants." The main recommendation was integration of Indian welfare with other territorial welfare services and withdrawal of Indian affairs branch agents from the region.

The growth of government scientific research from $35 million in 1945 to more than $220 million in 1961 was criticized as "fragmented" and "unbalanced." While the quality of the research was conceded to be uniformly high, the value of some of it was questioned.

The commission recommended that the president of the treasury board, whom it proposed in an earlier interim report, should be given primary responsibility for co-ordination of scientific research and development.

OPERATING BOARD

In addition to commenting on the CBC's failure to give due weight to the nation's ability to pay for the standard of broadcasting services which it provided, the commissioners also found that:

—The board of directors in fact was not responsible for CBC operations, which were dictated instead by top management. (The creation of an actual operating board employed full time and adequately remunerated, and assisted possibly by a regionally-appointed advisory committee was recommended.)

—The present corporation set-up lacks "any terminal philosophy or corporate goal" and a clear definition of its task and long-term objectives is essential.

—A single executive with clear authority over the field of programming is "a self-evident need."

—The headquarters organization where, out of a staff of more than 800, fewer than 20 are directly concerned with programming, is unbalanced.

—The engineering staff of 280 in Montreal is excessive, especially since the Columbia Broadcasting System in the United States, with almost twice the total number of employees of the CBC, has an engineering staff of only 116, which it plans to reduce.

—CBC salaries are too low in the higher echelons, with the result that there is too little scope for flexibility in the lower brackets.

School Board Cries 'Foul'

Greater-Victoria school trustees Tuesday night lashed back at "certain municipal leaders" who accused school boards of not caring a "tinker's dam" for the taxpayer in drawing up their budgets.

The remark in question was reported to have been made by Oak Bay Reeve George Murdoch after Education Minister Leslie Peterson's announced higher mill rates for school purposes.

Reeve Stanley Murphy of Saanich and Reeve A. C. Wurtel of Esquimalt also were reported to have criticized the board's handling of money.

'UNFAIR'

School board public relations committee chairman Peter Bunn called the remarks "unfair" and "unrealistic."

Other trustees pointed to the low mill rate in the current budget for School District 51 (19.5) as compared with the average (21.54) for school districts in the province.

"To say that this board is not careful how it spends money" and "doesn't care a tinker's dam" is grossly unfair both to officials and trustees," Mr. Bunn said.

He contended many hours were spent paring down the prepared budget by the finance committee in negotiating with local teachers over salaries, and by the buildings and grounds committee in allocating resources.

TRUE REFLECTION

"I feel the remarks of these municipal leaders are not realistic," Mr. Bunn protested. "Do they truly reflect the feeling of the general public?"

Trustee David Logan contended the municipal representatives were alone in their criticism of the board.

"We present referendums periodically for public approval," he said, "and the public should be aware of the money required to run our schools."

"As far as I know there is no public outcry against the school board. But when we get an outburst like this I feel it does a great deal of damage and requires a strong rebuttal."

Board chairman Mrs. Francis Thompson pointed out the criticism came after the budget had been completed.

NO APPEAL

"I am concerned that we didn't have one appeal from any municipal council to discuss the budget before its deadline (Feb. 20)," she said.

She said the city council only met with the board on Feb. 26.

"Perhaps it is unfortunate that we are getting 1,000 new pupils into our school system each year," Mrs. Thompson added.

PERFECT HAND

TORONTO (CP)—Brian Keating, a member of a Toronto contract bridge league Monday came up with what probably will be his best hand—he was able to bid a perfect seven no-trump.

Mr. Keating's hand: Ace, king and queen in hearts, diamonds and clubs, and ace, king, queen and jack in spades.

Actuary Hugh Stephenson, who with Graham Cooke won the men's pairs in the recent national contract bridge championship, figured the odds of Mr. Keating being dealt such a hand: 635,000,000 to one.

Councillors Delay Vote On Shelter

Saanich council Tuesday deferred its decision to rezone about 28-acres of property on West Saanich Road for animal shelter use until councillors have inspected the site.

The application to rezone the property for use as a home for animals was made by the Good Shepherd Animal Shelter which operates a shelter on Borden Street. It plans to re-locate on the West Saanich Road site.

Brian Hoole, president of the Prospect Lake and District Community Association, said members were opposed.

NOISE FEARS

W. E. Whitely, a lawyer representing several residents in the district, said his clients were opposed to the shelter because of possible noise and nuisance factors.

He also argued the shelter would result in a depreciation of property values in the district.

Mother Cecilia Mary speaking in support of the application assured residents that there would be no noise and nuisance factor if the shelter was established on the site.

"Most of our animals are small puppies," she said.

She recalled that the Sisters of the Love of Jesus who operate the shelter would also be of assistance to residents in the district.

"The care of animals is only a minor part of our work," she said. "We also nurse and teach children to be kind to animals."

Executions Increase

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Forty-six men and a woman were executed in the United States last year for crimes ranging from armed robbery to murder, the justice department reported today. The number was five more than in 1961.

Education Branch Blamed For Shifts, Overcrowding

A gloomy picture of shift classes and overcrowding in local schools next year was presented to Greater Victoria School Board Tuesday night.

Provincial department of education "procrastination" was blamed.

Assistant school superintendent Joseph Chell said overcrowding is hampering reallocation of classes in line with recommendations of the Chant report on education.

In 1963-64, the five senior high schools in the area will continue to embrace grades 10 to 12. The Chant report advocated senior high school grades be restricted to 11 and 12.

The senior institutions will retain grade 10 despite some grade 10 classes being transferred to all junior high schools but one (Gordon Head) next year. Basis of the division in the grade has yet to be worked out, Mr. Chell said.

The board has been able to transfer grade 7 classes to 25 elementary schools for the 1963-64 year. This year only nine elementary schools handle grade 7.

However, officials have seen the need to retain grade 7 at Gordon Head, S. J. Willis and Oak Bay junior high schools.

Mr. Chell also announced that congestion would force the dropping of a kindergarten class at Doncaster next year, and the possible implementation of shift systems at nine elementary schools.

Those involved would be: Burnside, Cloverdale, Craigflower, Doncaster, McKenzie, Monterey, Tolmie, Victoria West and View Royal.

Mr. Chell said that although 52 rooms in 10 schools have now been completed under the current building program, most secondary units will be forced to accommodate numbers of pupils beyond the "approved" capacity.

As an example, Victoria High School, which has a department of education approved capacity of 1,400 pupils, now has an enrolment of 1,530.

In 1963-64, this enrolment will be restricted to "about 1,420."

In reviewing the difficulties of the board in supplying the 30 classrooms needed each year to accommodate the annual 1,000 pupils increase, trustee David Logan blamed the Chant report itself, last year's building boom, architects, and above all, the provincial department, for local difficulties.

Planned building programs were put back a whole year by reorganization in class structure necessitated after the Chant report was made public, he said. This was particularly the case in schools involved in replacement of Grade 7 to elementary level.

Mr. Logan also said the local "building boom" experienced last year meant contractors were hard to find and prices generally were higher. But he laid the greatest blame at the door of the department of education.

"The department has been guilty of procrastination and has been stalling for time in meeting our requests," he said.

Buildings and grounds chairman George Curran said he had waited six weeks for approval from the department after submitting original plans.

Trustee Peter Bunn said the buildings and grounds committee had seen the need to get moving as early as possible, "but our plans just became bogged down in the morass at the Legislative Buildings."

At Tuesday night's meeting the board passed a resolution calling for departmental approval for immediate preparation of drawings for additions to Burnside, View Royal, Frank Hobbs, Strawberry Vale and Victoria West schools.

Bilingualism Need Stressed in Report

OTTAWA (CP)—Too many officers in the external affairs department don't speak French, the Glasco royal commission on government organization said Tuesday.

It said 256 officers of the department have a reasonably good command of French but another 172 admit incompetence. "Clearly this latter figure is too high," the commission said.

In the fourth volume of its report on government services, which also recommended transfer of the operation of the passport office to the immigration department, hiring of more women as career officers and the splitting of diplomatic and administrative duties in external affairs, the commission said:

"It should be a condition of permanent appointment in external affairs that the probationer equip himself with a sound working knowledge of the French and English languages....

"While this department has the best record of any in providing an appropriate balance between French- and non-French-speaking officers, the essential working language of the department is English and the culture in which the French-speaking officer is required to work and live is English-speaking.

"How to develop himself technically and professionally in an unfamiliar English-speaking milieu while yet retaining his French-Canadian roots and contributing to the department as a representative of the French-speaking culture remains a vital and serious problem."

Stressing also a need for proficiency in the French language, the report said:

"For many years French and English have been the principal languages of diplomacy. As the international community enlarges with the emergence of new states, a large number of them French-speaking, and French continues to be the second language in many non-French countries, the use of French as a working language is increasing to the point where bilingualism becomes a practical necessity."

GLASSCO REPORT

Liberals Facing Decision

OTTAWA (CP)—One of the decisions a new Liberal cabinet will face in the next few months is what to do about the 1,000,000-word report by the Glasco royal commission on government organization, set up 2½ years ago to find ways to eliminate waste and economize on federal operations.

During the last Parliament and in his election campaign Liberal Leader Pearson gave no indication of how he and top Liberals look upon the main Glasco proposals—some of them involving drastic shake-ups in the federal machine.

The fourth volume of the commission's report was issued today by Prime Minister Diefenbaker's office. The final volume is expected within a month.

Last November Mr. Diefenbaker said his government was prepared to adopt most of the Glasco suggestions and said Trade Minister McCutcheon would direct the job.

STAFF RECRUITED

George Davidson, deputy minister of citizenship and immigration was shifted to Senator McCutcheon's office to help with the work and a staff of senior civil servants was recruited to set up the organization.

Some of the ideas for streamlining civil service job-training, reducing the red tape in financial management and simplifying paperwork procedures have already been put into practice.

But Mr. Diefenbaker said no cabinet decision had been made on the royal commission's revolutionary proposals for watering down the central control of the Civil Service Commission and the treasury board, now the watchdogs of the entire civil service.

DO OWN HIRING

The first volume of the Glasco report, out last September, said the Civil Service Commission's role as a central hiring agency ought to be reduced to let the various departments and agencies do their own hiring in the same manner as private corporations.

Civil service staff organizations have been critical of this idea.

The same volume said the treasury board now wastes too much time and money on detailed scrutiny of spending. It ought to be limited to approving long-term spending programs, allowing department chiefs more freedom in individual items.

RADICAL DEPARTURE

Volume No. 2 urged creation of two new central organizations to handle all federal purchasing and property management, another radical departure from present practice.

Major item in the third volume was a plan to have the government withdraw from the operation of veterans' hospitals, now a $30,000,000 annual outlay, and gradually shift veterans into community hospitals.

This aroused a storm of protest and a comment from Mr. Diefenbaker that the proposal would not be accepted.

Volume No. 4 today advocates a reorganization of the CBC's management with more government direction, a ticklish political issue.

TRADE OFFICIAL HERE

U.K. Still Irked By Dumping Laws

Removal of Canadian import surcharges still leaves a prickly thorn in Britain's side due to old anti-dumping laws, a British trade commissioner said here Tuesday.

Alex Currall, 45, senior trade commissioner and economic adviser to the British High Commissioner in Ottawa, is making his first trip to B.C. since his appointment last December.

He met members of the cabinet, including Trade and Industries Minister Bonner, and was seeing Lieut. Gov. George Pearkes today.

Mr. Currall, a strapping six-footer, Edinburgh University graduate and Royal Artillery veteran, said the Canadian surcharges were a "very serious obstacle to British trade."

BETTER TIMES
"Now that they're off, we're looking forward to a better time again," the commissioner said.

He said in the period November, 1962-January, 1963, the British market in Canada had fallen off 25 per cent, compared with a decline of 15 per cent in the 1961-62 period.

There are still other problems, however, mainly the Canadian anti-dumping and fair market rules, affecting Britain more than other Canadian trading partners, due to the market structure.

These rules require that Britain may not sell in Canada at a lower price than in her domestic market at wholesale level.

HIGHER PRICES
In Canada, before a wholesaler gets the trade goods, a national distributor must have a share, with the result that the price is higher.

"We don't say Canada should not have anti-dumping rules—we have them, too. We only say that Canada's rules work against Britain more than others."

Britain wants an easier approach to the question, something along the lines of Britain's rule which requires proof of injury to a market before full imposition of the restriction.

"I'm collecting information on this point. I've collected a great deal in the 10 days I've been in B.C.," Mr. Currall said.

A big item Britain is hoping to sell to Canada is a fleet of BAC 111 short-medium haul jet aircraft to replace the aging Viscount and Vanguard turbojets of TCA.

"Trans-Canada must order the best possible aircraft and we think we've got it," the trade representative said.

Mike Takes Over Monday; John D. Formally Resigns

To Carry On In Opposition

By ALEX YOUNG
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Canada's new Liberal government will take office at 12 noon on Monday.

That is when Prime Minister Diefenbaker's resignation, formally submitted to Governor-General Vanier today, becomes effective.

After a 20-minute session with the governor-general today, Mr. Diefenbaker, stepping up to cameras, microphones and reporters with a smile, stated:

"I saw His Excellency the Governor-General. I informed him as to the results of the election. I gave him my resignation effective Monday next at the hour of 12 o'clock noon.

"He will proceed in the regular constitutional manner to provide an opportunity for my successor to take office."

In answer to reporters' questions, Mr. Diefenbaker also made clear that he intends to "carry on" as leader of the

Liberal Leader Visits Vanier

Just one hour after Mr. Diefenbaker left Government House the man who will succeed him as prime minister, Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson, received a call to visit the Governor-General at 3:30 p.m. (EST) today.

Mr. Pearson, whose party won 130 seats to the Conservatives' 94 seats in the April 8 general election, was at lunch when he received the message from Government House.

It was expected that Governor-General Vanier would ask Mr. Pearson if he was able to form a government. Then, next Monday at noon, Mr. Pearson would assemble with his chosen cabinet ministers at Government House to be sworn into office.

Meanwhile the Liberal leader told reporters he hopes to summon the new Parliament into session Thursday, May 16. This is the same date he frequently mentioned during the election campaign.

Members of Mr. Pearson's cabinet are not expected to be announced until they take office Monday.

Mr. Pearson said the Monday changeover time was set by Mr. Diefenbaker.

"I would have preferred Thursday or Friday," he said, but added that Monday was "all right with me."

Mr. Pearson said his cabinet choices are "practically complete" and it need be he could have taken office within 24 hours.

Mr. Diefenbaker arrived at Government House today for his noon appointment with the ailing Governor-General at 11:58.

He stepped from his car, with aide B. T. Richardson, smiled for photographers, doffed his hat, said "good morning," waved away the microphones of radio reporters, and entered Rideau Hall.

Mr. Diefenbaker wore a black morning coat and grey striped trousers.

The prime minister met with Governor-General Vanier in a second floor bedroom of Government House, where the Governor-General is recuperating from a mild heart attack he suffered on April 9.

The view from this bedroom, named the "Willingdon Room," after a former Governor-General, takes in the parliament buildings, about two miles away.

The Governor-General, according to aides, was attired in pyjamas and robe as he received the prime minister. There was a yellow upholstered chair for the prime minister to sit in.

The Governor-General has been instructed by his medical advisors that he may carry out his official duties from his sick bed, and may receive visitors, but that he must not make any public appearances for six weeks.

Mr. Diefenbaker was escorted to and from the vice-regal bedroom by the Governor-General's secretary, Esmond Butler, and by the Governor-General's aide-in-waiting, Continued on Page 30

Socreds Return To Fold

OTTAWA (CP)—The Social Credit party caucus announced today that all Quebec members who earlier declared their support for a Liberal government, have repudiated their statements and stand united with their Social Credit colleagues.

The statement, prepared by the Quebec wing of the caucus meeting here and approved by Social Credit Leader Robert Thomson in Edmonton, said a telegram has been sent to Governor-General Vanier by Gerard Perron (Beauce), Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford) and Raymond Langlois (Megantic) withdrawing their earlier commitment to support prime minister-designate Lester B. Pearson.

Originally, six Quebec Social Credit MPs elected sent a sworn statement to Gen. Vanier declaring they would support the Liberal party in the new Parliament. The three others—Pierre-Andre Boutin (Dorchester), Lucien Plourde (Quebec West) and Robert Beaulieu (Quebec East)—renounced the statement earlier.

'INCIDENT CLOSED'

Today's caucus statement, following lengthy meetings here Tuesday and in Edmonton, said the incident now is closed and that the party is united. The renunciations demonstrates "how the Liberal party is being scorned by Canadian citizens" and the popularity of the Social Credit party in Quebec is greater than ever, the statement said.

"The analysis of this vote shows that the Social Credit party has made impressive gains in Quebec," it said. Continued on Page 30

Holzworth 'a Liar,' Branca Tells Probe

By FRANK RUTTER

The man who charged graft in the highways department is a liar, lawyer Angelo Branca declared today.

He also suggested the accuser, Montana contractor Dick Holzworth, was a possible would-be blackmailer.

He branded him "a soldier of fortune."

He told the legislature's highway graft inquiry that it would be extremely dangerous to accept his uncorroborated evidence.

He also told the inquiry that every other witness who has appeared during the past six weeks of hearing has sworn there were no favors or preferential treatment by Highway Minister P. A. Gagliardi or his men on Project S19—centre of the allegations.

Mr. Holzworth's charges, in the form of an affidavit, were presented to the legislature Feb. 26 by Gordon Dowling (NDP—Burnaby). The inquiry followed.

Commented Mr. Branca: "Instead of the accuser being the one who brings evidence to prove allegations, we have been cornered and we have to prove our innocence. This is indeed unique in the administration of British justice."

He said right from the start there had been no support for the Holzworth allegations, even when the contractor himself took the stand.

"It was obvious to see everything he had to say in support of the allegations he swore to."

PLEASE DROP THE 'MAC' THIS ONCE—'PHERSON'

EDINBURGH (AP)—Thousands of Scots have been asked to drop the "Mac" or "Mc" from their names—just for once.

They shouldn't mind—it means money for them. They are among 6,000,000 pensioners in Scotland due for a pension increase next month. To collect, they must send their pension books to the local ministry of pensions office for adjustment in alphabetical order.

When the pension was increased once before, officials got so bogged down in the Ms that they have appealed to the Macs and Mcs to respond according to the second part of their names. Like Pheron, Tavish or Kenzie.

Wrong-Way Driver Killed on Thruway

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mrs. Barbara Ann Hale, about 30, was killed Tuesday night when the car she was driving in the wrong direction on the nearby Deas Island Thruway was in head-on collision with another automobile.

The woman's former husband, Jack Hale, was a passenger in the car, police said. He is reported in satisfactory condition in hospital suffering from head injuries.

Driver of the second vehicle, Michael Joseph Moran, suffered shock and bruises but did not require hospital treatment, police said.

Police said they were at a loss to understand how Mrs. Hale came to be driving north on the south-bound section of the thruway.

U.S. Contends Bomarc Still Best for Canada

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP)—A state department spokesman said today the United States considers the Bomarc anti-aircraft missile system the best available weapon for its purpose and presumes Canada will complete plans to acquire U.S. nuclear warheads for the two Canadian Bomarc squadrons.

The spokesman denied a report circulating in the U.S. and Canada saying the U.S. is disposed to allow Canada to back out of the Bomarc deal gracefully.

The report, published by the New York Herald Tribune, quoted unnamed Washington officials as saying alternative means of joint defence can be worked out.

The department later issued a statement saying "there has been no discussion of this sort either within the U.S. government or between the two governments."

The spokesman said there is no change in the status of the Bomarc and no approaches have been made by Canadian authorities—representing either the existing or the incoming government—to have the Bomarc system replaced by some other form of defence.

"The Bomarc weapon is the best available for its purpose," the spokesman said.

It is the U.S. government's hope, he added, that Canada-U.S. negotiations to provide U.S. nuclear warheads for the Bomarc and Canadian jet interceptors can be completed as soon as possible.

However, it is understood from other quarters that should a government headed by Liberal Leader Pearson insist on the Bomarc being withdrawn from Canada, the U.S. would give this request serious consideration and probably comply, providing a proposal for an alternative means of defence can be worked out.

Topics of the Day

Advantages and disadvantages of an official community master plan will be discussed by Capital Region Planning Board director A. H. Roberts at a public meeting next week. The meeting, sponsored by the Association of Women Electors, will be held at 8 p.m. April 25 in the music room of the Victoria Public Library.

A spokesman for the 100-member association formed last fall said the meeting probably would be of particular interest to men and women who were aroused by the current anti-high-rise campaign.

Chief of design for the Australian army, Brig. P. J. Jackson, visits Chilliwack and Nanaimo military bases this week and next.

The officer met Royal Canadian School of Military Engineering commandant Col. W. K. Lye today for a tour of training facilities, and he was to inspect the Nanaimo area April 26.

Camp area and the recently built underground federal emergency headquarters will be included before Brig. Jackson leaves for Ottawa the next day.

Gerald C. Lorain, French trade commissioner for British Columbia, Alberta and the Yukon, will speak at the annual International Night of the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce April 24 at the Net Loft Restaurant.

Double S Square Dancing Club will hold a car wash Friday between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. at Wayne Hamilton's Texaco service, Verdier and West Saanich Road, Brentwood, as a season-ending fund-raising effort.

NO HOLIDAY FOR POOCHES

Thirty-five children took their pet dogs to the first YWCA dog training course offered under the joint "Y" program during Easter holiday week.

Today the nine-to-14-year-olds were visiting kennels operated by Michael Williams, the course instructor, and on Thursday they will take part in a show at Victoria Riding Academy at 1:30 p.m.

Prizes for the dog knowing the most tricks, obeying the most commands and best deportment will be among those offered.

Dorothy Barker, Sooke Road, was fined $100 in Colwood police court Tuesday where she was found guilty earlier of assault causing bodily harm in the shooting of Donald Brascan Jan. 31.

She also was placed on a two-year $500 bond to keep the peace and be of good behavior. She claimed to have shot Brascan in the leg with a revolver in self-defence.

Thursday Meetings

Excited Guides Flit Among Totem Poles

The only straight faces at Thunderbird Park this morning were on the totem poles.

The others—belonging to 54 Girl Guides from throughout British Columbia—were animated and excited.

This is their big day. This afternoon they were to receive the Gold Guide certificate that signifies Guiding's highest rating from Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes.

TOUR SET

The Guides assembled at Thunderbird Park, had lunch at the Empress Hotel and then went to Government House. This evening they will be entertained and taken on tour by members of Victoria Girl Guide troops.

Among the 54 girls receiving awards are 11 from Vancouver Island. They are as follows:

Diane Blackford and Ann Varcoe, both of Campbell River; Sheila McFadden and Joan Shicklet, both of Nanaimo; Marian Garnett, Honey-moon Bay; Ann Gooding, Courtenay; Carolyn Gwyer, Parksville; and Doreen Dignan, Margaret Duncan, Beverley Hunter and Sylvia McKeever, all of Victoria.

Queen Rating Slated For 40 City Scouts

Forty Boy Scouts from Victoria will be among 300 from all parts of B.C. receiving Queen's scout certificates from Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes Thursday.

Queen's Scout classification is the top rating in the Scout movement.

The scouts from the mainland arrived in Victoria aboard HMCS New Glasgow, Stettler and St. Therese today. They will stay overnight at homes in Victoria and assemble at 9 a.m. Thursday at Thunderbird Park.

From there the scouts will visit the Legislative Buildings and go for a swim at the Crystal Garden and then have lunch at Government House. The presentation of certificates will be made at Government House between 2:30 and 4:30 p.m.

The Victoria youths who will receive awards are as follows:

JAYCEES DEFEND MISS VICTORIA CONTEST

... Bigoted View of One Man

By IAIN HUNTER

Accusations by Greater Victoria school superintendent John Gough levelled against the annual Miss Victoria contest has raised the wrath of the local Junior Chamber of Commerce which sponsors the contest.

Mr. Gough, in a report to the school board, Tuesday night condemned the contest as "an exploitation of youth" and "contrary to the proper tenets of education" set up by the provincial department.

Today Jaycee president Eric Charman termed the report "the bigoted view of one man."

WINS SUPPORT

He was supported by former Miss Victoria and winner of the 1961 Miss Canada contest Nina Holden, and by other officials of the local pageant.

The board agreed to go on record as "looking with disfavor" on the contest when Jaycees requested to be allowed to go into local schools with an appeal for contestants.

The request was rejected flatly by Mr. Gough.

In his report he said that "in spite of assertions to the contrary, this contest is based on physical charm, and the contestants are usually involved in a bathing beauty contest."

"The winners are surrounded by adulation which is not deserved praise," he said. "The report says such competitions 'create a false sense of values' among contestants and student bodies, endangers the winner's personality by 'cheesecake' pictures, publicity, gifts, and 'lavish holiday trips.'"

'NO REAL INTEREST'

"It should be noted, too, that participating businesses have no real interest in the contestant beyond her usefulness in advertising their products."

Chairman of the board, Mrs. Frances Thompson, pointed out that one winner of the contest, Vivi Peterson, left high school "because of it."

She was joined by other board members who said it wasted school time and played havoc with grades in many cases.

'IGNORANCE'

Mr. Charman said that the statement to the effect that the contest was based on physical charm was made "out of ignorance."

This was supported by Nina Holden in a telephone interview from Vancouver. She said that the contest was a scholarship foundation to begin with, and 60 per cent of the points were based on talent and education.

"Only 15 to 20 per cent of the marks are for beauty," she said, "40 for the face and five for figure."

She said the idea that the contest interfered with studies was "nonsense."

"They aren't looking for the most beautiful girl in the world in these contests," Miss Holden said, "they want the typical Canadian girl."

She said the contest did not give her "any false sense of values" but did give her more confidence and "an experience which I will always be grateful for."

'NOT ONE GIRL'

Mrs. Mary Rawnsley, who has been engaged as chaperone and judge in the contest for the past nine years, said "there is not one girl that I know of who has had to leave school" because of the Miss Victoria contest.

Mr. Charman said the support for the contest shown by local businessmen in the past proved that Mr. Gough was alone in his criticism.

"The queen is our gift to the city," he explained. "However, one former beauty queen, Synnove Pettersen, was not so sure the contest is completely harmless."

"For the wrong kind of girl it could do a great deal of harm," she said. "If she doesn't take it the right way it could go to her head."

Old Buildings Can't Be Used For Precinct

'No-Practical Way' Of Salvaging Them

Ald. A. W. Toone today said a final check of all possibilities showed there was no practical way of salvaging private buildings scheduled to come down in the civic precinct.

The chairman of Centennial Victoria Square committee, he said the survey was made by architects to make doubly sure that existing buildings could not be used for the proposed senior citizens recreation centre before final plans are drawn.

"We decided that it is impractical and not feasible economically to convert any of the buildings instead of building a new one," he said.

Anybody Seen Triple Petals On Dogwoods?

Victorians were quick to respond Tuesday to an appeal by horticulturist Jack Crossley for information on the whereabouts of odd flowering dogwood trees.

Mr. Crossley, who is in charge of ornamental tree research at the Dominion Experimental Farm, Saanichton, said today he was deluged with telephone calls to tell him where he can locate dogwood trees which bloom twice a year.

"I have now all the trees I want of this variety," he said.

But he added, he was still looking for dogwoods sporting double or triple petalled flowers.

"That would be a real find," he said. "If anyone knows of such a tree please phone Granite 5-2131."

Mr. Crossley is selecting special strains of dogwood for propagation and research.

2-Chance Harry Must Pay $100 For Junk Yard

Veteran junk dealer Harry Haigh, who was given two chances by magistrate William Ostler to clean up lumber and other refuse on his property at 1586 Rockland, was fined for failing to do so when he appeared in city police court today.

He was fined $100 and was bound over in his own recognizance on a six-month bond for $200, after pleading guilty to a charge of keeping an unlicensed junkyard.

He had appeared in court April 1 and April 9 on the charge, but had been remanded for an opportunity to clean up the property to the satisfaction of city building inspectors.

BUT WHAT DO THEY DRINK? WHERE DO THEY GET THEIR WATER?

Donations Needed For Saturday's Free Food Stall

An appeal for donations of food for the Free Food Stall was made today by Mrs. E. Harper, convener.

She is faced with a serious shortage of food needed to look after more than 275 persons who will be calling at the stall Saturday noon.

"Unless food donations are forthcoming, I'm afraid many families may have to go without," she said. "I haven't yet received enough food for a car to pick up."

Contributors are asked to contact Mrs. Harper at GR 4-1750. She will make arrangements to pick up donations of food.

Settlements Within Week Seen With Civic Unions

Intensive negotiating sessions between City Hall and two civic unions probably will produce settlements within the week, one of the participants speculated today.

The bargaining involves a 4 per cent wage increase and 35-hour work week re-

Woman Tells Assizes How Pedestrian Died

A car in fatal collision with an elderly pedestrian New Year's Day was travelling erratically just before the impact an Assize Court jury was told today.

Witness Mrs. Elizabeth Simonson, 2824 Shelbourne, gave evidence at the trial of Hendrick Witteveen, charged with criminal negligence, hit-run and impaired driving in connection with the death of Arthur V. Seear.

The 79-year-old victim had lived at 2042 Meadow.

Mrs. Simonson, a passenger in a car driven by her husband, said she saw a car ahead of their auto weaving on the street and collide with a pedestrian at Bay and Richmond.

She said she saw the victim rolling on the street and noted the car's licence number before it drove off.

Mr. Seear was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital emergency ward, about a block away, then transferred to Veterans' Hospital after initial treatment. He died a short time later.

AT DUSK

The incident happened about 5 p.m. Jan. 1 as darkness fell.

About 10 witnesses have been heard in the trial being held before Mr. Justice David Verchere at Victoria Law Court. It began Tuesday afternoon.

Rodney Taylor is counsel for accused. Alan Baker, QC, is crown prosecutor.

Park Group Meets

April meeting of the Thetis Park Natural Sanctuary Association will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday in Douglas Building cafeteria.

Dr. Clifford Carl, Provincial Museum curator, will show a film, Island Exploration, dealing with the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Amalgamation Called Best Answer to Balkanized Municipal Pay Talks

A city lawyer's plea for area-wide municipal wage negotiations would be a point covered by the amalgamation of Greater Victoria, a labor spokesman said today.

Victoria Labor Council secretary A. W. Toone—also an alderman—was replying to a report made to Mayor R. B. Wilson by Edwin E. Pearlman, the city's chief negotiator in police, firemen and municipal staff contract matters.

Unless the municipalities work together to establish "reasonable wages and working conditions," they will continue to be faced with costs completely unrelated to the economy of the area, Mr. Pearlman said.

There was "no justification" for wage increases to police and firemen awarded this year by binding conciliation, the lawyer said.

"If the present loose method of negotiation within the area continues, the situation will probably deteriorate and become even less related to actual conditions in this city and area," Mr. Pearlman reported.

Mr. Toone said looking at the situation in perspective, the suggestion is nearly what the city proposed under amalgamation. But he could not see how an effective joint system of negotiation could be brought about as long as there are separate jurisdictions.

"The fault lies in negotiations, rather than in arbitration findings," Mr. Toone said. "There should be real, earnest negotiations (for police and firemen, for example), rather than the feeling that the whole thing will be wrapped up by arbitration."

There is an aloofness in negotiations, and not enough bargaining in good faith, Mr. Toone said. Bargaining sessions should be carried on in the same spirit as exists with private industry.

Mr. Toone said it was difficult to separate his thinking on this matter as alderman and labor representative, "but perhaps they shouldn't be separated. There are good points and faults on both sides."

A police union spokesman was reluctant to comment on Mr. Pearlman's suggestions. "He's entitled to his opinions," said Lorne Shandley. "We refuse to get into any type of controversy like in 1960—two solid weeks of abuse."

He referred to a violent reaction against union contract requests that year.

Oak Bay Reeve George Murdoch agreed with Mr. Pearlman in principle: "That's the only way to do it—negotiate on an area basis."

He did not wish to comment further as Oak Bay negotiations are not yet settled.

The reeve proposed a labor court to settle disputes, with a judge appointed by the province. This would result in "far more impartial decisions than we get from arbitration boards," he said.

Mr. Pearlman mentioned composition of conciliation boards, which for police and firemen have the effect of arbitration because their decisions are binding.

He was critical of outsiders acting as chairmen and urged that in future the city "make appropriate representation to the department of labor that the chairman come from the Victoria area."

There is a "determined effort (in negotiations) to tie Victoria in with Vancouver and I don't think the economies are the same at all," Mr. Pearlman commented today.

"There are highly industrialized, high-wage areas that still pay police and firemen less than Victoria," he said.

He said "it seems completely beyond belief but nevertheless it is a fact" that Victoria pays police and firemen more than any other Canadian city except Vancouver and its environs.

There, the rates are $8 a month higher than in Victoria.

This results in $488 a month for first class police and firemen here.

"When you think of the size of Victoria, primarily residential and not industrial, paying a higher rate than Montreal, with all its waterfrontage which is always considered a fire hazard... Windsor with its proximity to the border... take a city like Sudbury, with as tough a bunch of men as you'll find anywhere, Victoria seems out of line," Mr. Pearlman said.

He said: "I don't think Victoria police and firemen should not get a high wage as long as they deserve it." Victoria looks after its police and firemen exceptionally well."

Navy Draws Bead On Cost-Cutters

By PETE LOUDON

A proposal for replacement of 16,000 servicemen by civilian workers was torpedoed by the navy today.

A spokesman for Esquimalt naval establishment and two retired admirals rejected the newest cost-cutting recommendation of the Glasco Royal Commission.

The commission said at Ottawa Tuesday that nearly half of Canada's armed forces are engaged in support of non-combat activities.

SAVE $20 MILLION

If civilians took over 16,000 of these 60,000 jobs, the savings would amount to $20 million annually, it stated.

A naval spokesman for the 5,000-man Pacific Command of the RCN said he couldn't speak for the army or air force. "But we already employ civilians in every possible capacity," he said.

All motor transport drivers and harbor craft crews are civilian. So are telephone operators, many administration personnel and all the naval dockyard maintenance people, he added.

ALL COMBATANTS

Two retired admirals doubled admirably to action stations: Rear Admiral E. P. Tisdall, 1560 Mount Douglas Cross Road, vice-chief of naval staff until his retirement about two years ago, said:

"Every man who joins the navy joins for sea duty. None are recruited for shore duty.

"It is improper to say any of them are non-combatants."

Admiral Tisdall said about 50 per cent of RCN personnel are aboard ship, ready for combat. And the bulk of those based ashore are taking courses or serving in instructional or administrative work on a non-permanent basis, but must also expect eventual sea duty.

SOME AT OTTAWA

"There may be some personnel at Ottawa who could be replaced by civilians," he added.

Rear Admiral J. C. Hibbard, a former flag officer, Pacific Coast, stated:

"My first reaction is that a navy with 50 per cent of its personnel afloat in combat-ready ships is most commendable. I know of no country with a higher percentage in ships.

"To consider reducing the number ashore might not necessarily lead to greater efficiency."

Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtele (a former commander), was asked whether more civilians in the naval service might be beneficial to the community.

Would it mean more long-term family settlement, more jobs for women, less early retirement?

NOT TOO MANY

"That could be so, but not too many could be replaced by civilian workers," he thought and the overall effect would make little change to the community, he said.

And he thought that a changeover could mean some jobs would disappear — there wouldn't be as many civilians on the payroll as there are naval personnel now, perhaps, Reeve Wurtele added.

The navy supporters also pointed out that the Glasco report itself shows that the navy now has only 20 per cent of its headquarters staff in uniform compared to over 50 per cent each in the army and air force.

... BRANCA

was indeed a puff-ball that exploded.

Mr. Branca drew attention to Mr. Holzworth's evidence that he lost $200,000 on Project 819 and that he was out to recover it, and that he expected to get some money out of the highways department.

He said that Mr. Holzworth could only have had two motives in making his graft charges: blackmail or to force an inquiry which he would use as an examination for discovery in a future lawsuit to recover money.

Mr. Branca suggested "he thought he was going to blackmail the minister—in what other manner could he get money from the minister?"

ALLEGATIONS

The main Holzworth allegations were these:

That the contractor on 819 was paid $135,000 for work never done; that contractors paid Mrs. Florence Greysty $350 a month while she was organizer in Mr. Gagliardi's Kamloops church.

Mr. Branca first dealt with Mrs. Greysty.

She testified she never played the organ and never received the money—in fact, she did not know how to play the organ.

Even Mr. Holzworth had been unable to substantiate the charge.

Three other witnesses who had attended a meeting on the project at which the decision was allegedly made to pay her also denied knowing anything about it.

"If you believe them as I do then Holzworth is a plain, simple liar," Mr. Branca said.

"If he is lying in this plain and simple incident I am going to ask you to come to the conclusion that he has not told the truth in anything else."

Next Mr. Branca dealt with the Holzworth charge that Mr. Gagliardi prevailed upon contractor Clyde W. Thornton to pay off a mortgage debt of

HONEST DEBT

Mr. Branca said that it was departmental comptroller A. E. Rhodes, not Mr. Gagliardi, who suggested Mr. Thornton pay the debt.

"This was an honest debt," Mr. Branca said.

He said that despite several checks, the highways department had been unable to prove Mr. Greysty was involved while a government employee with sub-contractors on Project 819.

The next Holzworth charge was that figures were altered on progress estimates of Project 819 to give the contractors an extra $135,000.

Mr. Branca said that departmental engineers and federal engineer Bruce G. Harvey all testified that there was nothing wrong in the alterations.

"The minister has nothing to do with the estimates," he added.

MORE EQUIPMENT

It was "quite simple" to see why the estimates were changed to allow for more work—there was more equipment on the job to do it.

A charge by Mr. Holzworth that the provincial engineer on the spot, Eric H. Barclay, refused to approve the changes was "incredible," Mr. Branca said.

Although Mr. Holzworth didn't raise the point, Opposition members of the inquiry had brought out evidence that two carpenters on the payroll of the contractor on Project 819 worked on Mr. Gagliardi's church at Kamloops.

Mr. Gagliardi Tuesday testified they were "donated."

Mr. Branca said the government paid the contractor only for the amount of rock moved on the road project.

"Can you see anything wrong in a company that is being paid by production of a unit and which has a contract with the government in contributing manpower material or otherwise to the building of a church?"

FULFILL APPEAL

Mr. Gagliardi had also testified he appealed from his pulp for volunteer labor.

"Every time a church is built an appeal is made by the pastor to his flock," Mr. Branca declared.

The whole matter appeared in the press in 1959, he said.

"Why did we have to drag this thing out again?"

He said he hoped that after the inquiry the whole issue "will have been cremated once and for good."

Mr. Branca complained that newspaper headlines during the inquiry had damaged the character of persons involved.

He suggested in future such meetings might be held in camera.

However the highways minister and all his officials had "exuded truth, honesty and integrity."

"Every credible witness that has come before you... has told you there was not preferential treatment—that there were no favors at all and no money exchanged."

He said the inquiry had no alternative but to acquit not only the minister of highways, but all his officials of any wrong doing.

Co-ordinated Research Advocated

OTTAWA (CP)—The Glasco royal commission on government organization said today the effectiveness of Canada's defence may be seriously damaged unless defence development policy is properly co-ordinated.

It recommended establishment of a defence-engineering "high command" to eliminate undue overlapping of development programs.

The need for co-ordination and direction at the highest level applied not only to defence research and development, but to all aspects of scientific research in Canada.

The president of the treasury board, a new senior cabinet post proposed in a previous volume of the Glasco report, should be designated as minister responsible for scientific policy and co-ordination of existing activities in research and development. Under his direction, a central scientific bureau would act as a science secretariat.

gains all across Canada. In Quebec, the popularity of this party is greater than ever and indicates a bright future," the statement said.

"This incident regarding the six members-elect gave us the chance to see by the reactions of the people how the Liberal party is held in contempt by the Canadian people."

Tuesday party spokesmen said they had no intention of expelling from their ranks the six Quebec MPs, nor of penalizing them.

"We have perfect unity in our party and it will be made clear when our statement is published," one said.

Mr. Thompson and Dr. Guy Marcoux, member for Quebec-Montmorency, have both criticized the six for sending their statement to the governor-general Friday without consulting party leaders. Both said they heard reports that Liberal agents were offering "handsome remuneration" to any Social Credit MP who would support the Pearson government.

This was denied by Real Caouette, Social Credit deputy leader, and by several Liberal spokesmen.

Not all those coming out of the caucus spoke of unity.

David E. Hartman of Toronto, unsuccessful candidate in Peterborough in the last election, told reporters there is "a struggle for power" in Social Credit ranks between Premier Manning and Mr. Caouette.

"You can quote me, Manning wants to dump Caouette," Mr. Hartman said. Mr. Thompson is a puppet of Premier Manning. The party should choose a new national leader and Mr. Manning should restrict himself to provincial affairs, he added.

Mr. Caouette Tuesday repeated his criticism of Mr. Thompson for bypassing him when the national leader asked Dr. Marcoux to investigate the circumstances of the surprise statement by the six.

He said he could not do this. Then he was asked if he had recommended that the Governor-General call on Mr. Pearson to form a government.

"There is no necessity of any indication in that regard," he smiled. "Three Social Credit members have determined to give their votes to Mr. Pearson to give and provide him with a majority."

(At about the same time, as Mr. Diefenbaker was referring to the three Socreds, a caucus of Quebec Socred MPs issued a statement declaring that no Socreds, including the three mentioned by Mr. Diefenbaker, were giving their vote to Mr. Pearson.)

Mr. Diefenbaker said he found Governor-General Vanier "in excellent good humor." He said he did not mean any play of words in saying that. The prime minister also was asked what led him to establish 12 noon next Monday as the effective time for his resignation.

"I have nothing to add," he said.

His resignation, in effect, is a post-dated resignation. When he was asked by this correspondent Tuesday if he intended to submit such a resignation, he asked what the question implied. He was told that it was assumed he would be seeing the Governor-General to resign.

Such an assumption, he declared Tuesday, was not well founded. However, today he tendered a post-dated resignation.

Exile 'Paper' To Be Bared

NEW YORK (UPI)—Cuban exile sources said today the Cuban Revolutionary Council will defy Washington pressure and make public a 10,000-word Cuban "white paper" described as "embarrassing" to the Kennedy administration.

The 23-page document, a copy of which was given Washington last April 5, will be made public at an open meeting of the council in Miami Thursday night, the sources said.

Exile leaders said the Kennedy administration threatened to deny administration threatened council President Jose Miro Cardona with immediate deportation if the document is made public, and also said no council member ever would be received in Washington again.

VICTORIA MAN'S TRIAL UNAFFECTED BY DEATH

VANCOUVER (CP)—Court officials said today that the death of a Crown witness will not affect the trial of a man charged with possessing bond coupons stolen from a St. Catharines, Ont., bank.

A spokesman said another executive of Premier Trust Company, St. Catharines, can be brought here to replace witness William Dales, 57.

Mr. Dales, manager of the firm, was swept to his death Monday over Horseshoe Falls at Niagara, Ont.

David Wilson, 32, of Victoria, is charged with possession of coupons from part of the $837,000 in bonds stolen from Premier Trust in 1959.

Navy Court Cites Sub Escort Chief

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP)—A navy court has cited the skipper of a submarine escort vessel for apparent failure to advise higher authorities of the final messages from the submarine USS Thresher, lost with 129 men.

The court named—but did not charge—Lt.-Cmdr. Stanley W. Hecker, 36, of Brooklyn, N.Y., skipper of the Skylark which was accompanying the Thresher when she made her fatal test dive last Wednesday.

Vice-Admiral Bernard L. Austin, president of the court of inquiry, recalled Hecker to the stand Tuesday and advised him: "The court has concluded that your conduct as commanding officer of the USS Skylark, as revealed by evidence presented to the court, appears to be subject to inquiry."

Mayor, Chiefs Praise Police Grant

Mayor R. B. Wilson and local police chiefs Monday praised an announcement that the province has made a $5,000 grant to help pay for training of civic policemen at the Vancouver police training academy.

Vancouver Police Chief Ralph Booth said the grant would cover the $7 per day tuition charges made for policemen from Victoria, Oak Bay, Delta, Matsqui and West Vancouver scheduled to take courses at the academy.

"While metro policing is no closer, steps are being taken for more uniform training and Oak Bay Police Chief Robert Smith said the grant "cuts the bill in half" for sending a man to the mainland academy because only living expenses now have to be covered.

He said his department plans to send a man to Vancouver for a five-day course on personnel supervision.

The Victoria department will send Insp. Ray Maitland and Insp. Brooke Douglass for courses at the academy this month. co-operation between the different forces," he said.

government by the northern inhabitants." The main recommendation was integration of Indian welfare with other territorial welfare services and withdrawal of Indian affairs branch agents from the region.

The growth of government scientific research from $35 million in 1945 to more than $220 million in 1961 was criticized as "fragmented" and "unbalanced." While the quality of the research was conceded to be uniformly high, the value of some of it was questioned.

The commission recommended that the president of the treasury board, whom it proposed in an earlier interim report, should be given primary responsibility for co-ordination of scientific research and development.

OPERATING BOARD

In addition to commenting on the CBC's failure to give due weight to the nation's ability to pay for the standard of broadcasting services which it provided, the commissioners also found that:

—The board of directors in fact was not responsible for CBC operations, which were dictated instead by top management. (The creation of an actual operating board employed full time and adequately remunerated, and assisted possibly by a regionally-appointed advisory committee was recommended.)

—The present corporation set-up lacks "any terminal philosophy or corporate goal" and a clear definition of its task and long-term objectives is essential.

—A single executive with clear authority over the field of programming is "a self-evident need."

—The headquarters organization where, out of a staff of more than 800, fewer than 20 are directly concerned with programming, is unbalanced.

—The engineering staff of 280 in Montreal is excessive, especially since the Columbia Broadcasting System in the United States, with almost twice the total number of employees of the CBC, has an engineering staff of only 116, which it plans to reduce.

—CBC salaries are too low in the higher echelons, with the result that there is too little scope for flexibility in the lower brackets.

Dief Resigns, Will Carry On In Opposition

By ALEX YOUNG
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Canada's new Liberal government will take office at 12 noon on Monday.

That is when Prime Minister Diefenbaker's resignation, formally submitted to Governor-General Vanier today, becomes effective.

After a 20-minute session with the governor-general today, Mr. Diefenbaker, stepping up to cameras, microphones and reporters with a smile, stated:

"I saw His Excellency the Governor-General. I informed him as to the results of the election. I gave him my resignation effective Monday next at the hour of 12 o'clock noon.

"He will proceed in the regular constitutional manner to provide an opportunity for my successor to take office."

In answer to reporters' questions, Mr. Diefenbaker also made clear that he intends to "carry on" as leader of the Official Conservative Opposition, and set his sights towards again becoming prime minister.

"I intend to carry on," he said, when asked about his future plans. "I will be available as the leader of the opposition. It will be an interesting session. I look forward with interest to the session."

He said he believes he is the eighth of Canada's 13 prime ministers who, having occupied that office, served as opposition leader afterwards.

"While you can never tell the future, two of them—I believe Macdonald and King—became prime minister again. I intend to endeavor to follow their example."

Liberal Leader Visits Vanier

Just one hour after Mr. Diefenbaker left Government House the man who will succeed him as prime minister, Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson, received a call to visit the Governor-General at 3:30 p.m. (EST) today.

Mr. Pearson, whose party won 130 seats to the Conservatives' 94 seats in the April 8 general election, was at lunch when he received the message from Government House.

It was expected that Governor-General Vanier would ask Mr. Pearson if he was able to form a government. Then, next Monday at noon, Mr. Pearson would assemble with his chosen cabinet ministers at Government House to be sworn into office.

Meanwhile the Liberal leader told reporters he hopes to summon the new Parliament into session Thursday, May 16. This is the same date he frequently mentioned during the election campaign.

Members of Mr. Pearson's cabinet are not expected to be announced until they take office Monday.

Mr. Pearson said the Monday changeover time was set by Mr. Diefenbaker. "I would have preferred Thursday or Friday," he said, but added that Monday was "all right with me."

Mr. Pearson said his cabinet choices are "practically complete" and if need be he could have taken office within 24 hours.

Mr. Diefenbaker arrived at Government House today for his noon appointment with the ailing Governor-General at 11:58.

Mr. Diefenbaker wore a black morning coat and grey striped trousers.

The prime minister met with Governor-General Vanier in a second floor bedroom of Government House, where the Governor-General is recuperating from a mild heart attack he suffered on April 9.

Mr. Diefenbaker was escorted to and from the vice-regal bedroom by the Governor-General's secretary, Edmund Butler, and by the Governor-General's aide-in-waiting.

KAMLOOPS (CP)—Jarl Whist, Liberal candidate in the April 8 general election, today conceded the election to Dr. Charles Wiloughby, Progressive Conservative candidate in Kamloops riding. Earlier, it had been indicated the Liberals would ask for a judicial recount.

Holzworth 'A Liar' Probe Told

The man who charged graft in the highways department is a liar, lawyer Angelo Branca declared today.

He also suggested the accuser, Montana contractor Dick Holzworth, was a possible would-be blackmailer.

He branded him "a soldier of fortune."

He told the legislature's highway graft inquiry that it would be extremely dangerous to accept his uncorroborated evidence.

He also told the inquiry that every other witness who has appeared during the past six weeks of hearing has sworn there were no favors or preferential treatment by Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi or his men on Project 819—centre of the allegations.

Mr. Branca, the highways department counsel, was summing up the evidence as the inquiry drew to a close.

He was to continue this afternoon, and then the 13 MLAs who stayed in Victoria after the end of the session were to go into secret meetings to draw up their report to the cabinet.

Mr. Holzworth's charges, in the form of an affidavit, were presented to the legislature Feb. 26 by Gordon Dowling (NDP—Burnaby). The inquiry followed.

Commented Mr. Branca: "Instead of the accuser being the one who brings evidence to prove allegations, we have been cornered and we have to prove our innocence. This is indeed unique in the administration of British justice."

He said right from the start there had been no support for the Holzworth allegations, even when the contractor himself took the stand.

"It was obvious to see everything he had to say in support of the allegations he swore to."

HOW MUCH CAN NATION AFFORD?

CBC Doesn't Weigh Cost Against Need—Glassco

OTTAWA (UPI)—The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is described as an organization which fails to weigh "cost against need"—and against the nation's ability to pay—in the latest installment of the Glassco commission report issued today.

"A production organization has been created which is one of the largest theatrical enterprises in the world," the royal commission commented.

After conceding that CBC policy has been to "strive for superior quality and that there is universal agreement that a very high standard has been reached," the royal commission added bluntly that "no evidence exists of any weighing of cost against need and the impression gained is that, generally, the pursuit of high quality has been carried on without taking into consideration what the country can afford."

The CBC was one of five fields of government activity which today's section of the Glassco commission report covered.

The others were the departments of defence, external affairs, northern affairs, and scientific research and development.

In respect to the defence department the report recommended breaking down "the traditional distinctions among the three armed services in a growing range of matters" and that the position of the chairman of the chiefs of staff should be strengthened to this end.

A companion recommendation was that the separation of the military and civilian personnel of the department into watertight compartments also be broken down and that for this purpose the authority of the deputy minister of national defence should be enlarged.

Another major proposal was that the "costly retirement policy of the services" whereby enlisted personnel are pensioned when they approach the age of 50 should be discontinued, and that these individuals should be transferred to civilian posts in the defence department.

The major recommendation affecting the external affairs department was that there should be greater co-ordination of federal government services abroad.

The commission noted that the staffs of other departments' broad equal in numbers the personnel of the department of external affairs outside Canada.

The report also found that the rotation of foreign officers for periods of duty in Canada was wasteful. It advocated creation of a separate administrative department to support diplomats in the field.

It approved the "generalist" concept of rotating foreign service officers through a wide variety of postings, but advised that they also be assigned for extended periods to specialized areas to acquire the regional expertise essential for competent formulation of foreign policy.

COMMENDED

The northern affairs department emerged from the royal commission's probing with high commendation for promoting the "gradual development of self-

Hornung, Karras Out; Five Fined

NEW YORK (AP)—Paul Hornung of Green Bay Packers and Alex Karras of Detroit Lions were suspended indefinitely by the National Football League today.

Five other Detroit players were fined $2,000 each and the Detroit club was fined $4,000 as a result of an investigation into professional football betting.

The five Detroit players were fined $2,000 each for betting $50 each on the 1962 championship game between the New York Giants and Green Bay. The players are John Gordy, an offensive guard; Gordy Lowe, a defensive halfback; Joe Schmidt, all-star middle linebacker; Wayne Walker, linebacker, and Sam Williams, defensive end. They were not suspended.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle supervised the investigation and announced the findings at a press conference in his office.

Rozelle said investigation of allegations that Carroll Rosenbloom, president of Baltimore Colts, had bet on league games, was not completed. He said that Rosenbloom had denied the charges in a sworn affidavit.

SAYS HORNUNG BET

Rozelle said Hornung, a halfback and the league's most valuable player in 1961, had placed bets on NFL and college games in some instances reaching the sum of $500, from 1959 through 1961. Rozelle said Hornung also had transmitted specific information concerning NFL games for betting purposes.

Karras, the 250-pound defensive tackle of the Lions who said in a television interview he bet on games but only for cigarettes and cigars, was judged guilty of associating with individuals described by Detroit police as "known hoodlums."

Rozelle said Karras had made at least six significant bets on NFL games since 1958 ranging from $50 to $100. He said there was no evidence of any criminal wrongdoing or any evidence that Karras sold information for betting purposes or bet against his own team.

'Bomarc Still Best For Canada'

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP)—A state department spokesman said today the United States considers the Bomarc anti-aircraft missile system the best available weapon for its purpose and presumes Canada will complete plans to acquire U.S. nuclear warheads for the two Canadian Bomarc squadrons.

The spokesman denied a report circulating in the U.S. and Canada saying the U.S. is disposed to allow Canada to back out of the Bomarc deal gracefully.

The report, published by the New York Herald Tribune, quoted unnamed Washington officials as saying alternative means of joint defence can be worked out.

The department later issued a statement saying "there has been no discussion of this sort either within the U.S. government or between the two governments."

The spokesman said there is no change in the status of the Bomarc and no approaches have been made by Canadian authorities — representing

Socreds Return To Fold

OTTAWA (CP)—The Social Credit party caucus announced today that all Quebec members who earlier declared their support for a Liberal government have repudiated their statements and stand united with their Social Credit colleagues.

The statement, prepared by the Quebec wing of the caucus meeting here and approved by Social Credit Leader Robert Thomson in Edmonton, said a telegram has been sent to Governor-General Vanier by Gerard Perron (Beauce), Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford) and Raymond Langlois (Megantic) withdrawing their earlier commitment to support prime minister-designate Lester B. Pearson.

Originally, six Quebec Social Credit MPs elected sent a sworn statement to Gen. Vanier declaring they would support the Liberal party in the new Parliament. The three others—Pierre-Andre Boutin (Dorchester), Lucien Plourde (Quebec West) and Robert Beaulieu (Quebec East)—renounced the statement earlier.

'INCIDENT CLOSED'

Today's caucus statement, following lengthy meetings here Tuesday and in Edmonton, said the incident now is closed and that the party is united.

Navy Draws Bead On Cost-Cutters

By PETE LOUDON

A proposal for replacement of 16,000 servicemen by civilian workers was torpedoed by the navy today.

A spokesman for Esquimalt naval establishment and two retired admirals rejected the newest cost-cutting recommendation of the Glasco Royal Commission.

The commission said at Ottawa Tuesday that nearly half of Canada's armed forces are engaged in support of non-combat activities.

SAVE $20 MILLION

If civilians took over 16,000 of these 60,000 jobs, the savings would amount to $20 million annually, it stated.

A naval spokesman for the 5,000-man Pacific Command of the RCN said he couldn't speak for the army or air force.

"But we already employ civilians in every possible capacity," he said.

All motor transport drivers and harbor craft crews are civilian. So are telephone operators, many administration personnel and all the naval dockyard maintenance people, he added.

ALL COMBATANTS

Two retired admirals doubled admirably to action stations:

Rear Admiral E. P. Tisdall, 1560 Mount Douglas-Cross Road, vice-chief of naval staff until his retirement about two years ago, said:

"Every man who joins the navy joins for sea duty. None are recruited for shore duty."

"It is improper to say any of them are non-combatants."

Admiral Tisdall said about 50 per cent of RCN personnel are aboard ship, ready for combat. And the bulk of those based ashore are taking courses or serving in instructional or administrative work on a non-permanent basis, but must also expect eventual sea duty.

SOME AT OTTAWA

"There may be some personnel at Ottawa who could be replaced by civilians," he added.

Rear Admiral J. C. Hibbard, a former flag officer, Pacific Coast, stated:

"My first reaction is that a navy with 50 per cent of its personnel afloat in combat-ready ships is most commendable. I know of no country with a higher percentage in ships."

"To consider reducing the number ashore might not necessarily lead to greater efficiency."

Esquimalt Reeve A. C. Wurtele (a former commander), was asked whether more civilians in the naval services might be beneficial to the community.

Would it mean more long-term family settlement, more jobs for women, less early retirement?

NOT TOO MANY

"That could be so, but not too many could be replaced by civilian workers," he thought and the overall effect would make little change to the community, he said.

And he thought that a changeover could mean some jobs would disappear — there wouldn't be as many civilians on the payroll as there are naval personnel now, perhaps, Reeve Wurtele added.

The navy supporters also pointed out that the Glasco report itself shows that the navy now has only 20 per cent of its headquarters staff in uniform compared to over 50 per cent each in the army and air force.

... BRANCA

was indeed a puff-ball that exploded.

Mr. Branca drew attention to Mr. Holzworth's evidence that he lost $200,000 on Project 819 and that he was out to recover it, and that he expected to get some money out of the highways department.

He said that Mr. Holzworth could only have had two motives in making his graft charges: blackmail or to force an inquiry which he would use as an examination for discovery in a future lawsuit to recover money.

Mr. Branca suggested "he thought he was going to blackmail the minister—in what other manner could he get money from the minister?"

ALLEGATIONS

The main Holzworth allegations were these:

That the contractor on 819 was paid $135,000 for work never done; that contractors paid Mrs. Florence Greysty $350 a month while she was organist in Mr. Gagliardi's Kamloops church.

Mr. Branca first dealt with Mrs. Greysty.

She testified she never played the organ and never received the money—in fact, she did not know how to play the organ.

Even Mr. Holzworth had been unable to substantiate the charge.

Three other witnesses who had attended a meeting on the project at which the decision was allegedly made to pay her also denied knowing anything about it.

"If you believe them as I do then Holzworth is a plain, simple liar," Mr. Branca said.

"If he is lying in this plain and simple incident I am going to ask you to come to the conclusion that he has not told the truth in anything else."

Next Mr. Branca dealt with the Holzworth charge that Mr. Gagliardi prevailed upon contractor Clyde W. Thornton to pay off a mortgage debt of

HONEST DEBT

Mr. Branca said that it was departmental comptroller A. E. Rhodes, not Mr. Gagliardi, who suggested Mr. Thornton pay the debt.

"This was an honest debt," Mr. Branca said.

He said that despite several checks, the highways department had been unable to prove Mr. Greysty was involved while a government employee with subcontractors on Project 819.

The next Holzworth charge was that figures were altered on progress estimates of Project 819 to give the contractors an extra $135,000.

Mr. Branca said that departmental engineers and federal engineer Bruce G. Harvey all testified that there was nothing wrong in the alterations.

"The minister has nothing to do with the estimates," he added.

MORE EQUIPMENT

It was "quite simple" to see why the estimates were changed to allow for more work—there was more equipment on the job to do it.

A charge by Mr. Holzworth that the provincial engineer on the spot, Eric H. Barclay, refused to approve the changes was "incredible," Mr. Branca said.

Although Mr. Holzworth didn't raise the point, Opposition members of the inquiry had brought out evidence that two carpenters on the payroll of the contractor on Project 819 worked on Mr. Gagliardi's church at Kamloops.

Mr. Gagliardi Tuesday testified they were "donated."

Mr. Branca said the government paid the contractor only for the amount of rock moved on the road project.

"Can you see anything wrong in a company that is being paid by production of a unit and which has a contract with the government in contributing manpower material or otherwise to the building of a church?"

PULPIT APPEAL

Mr. Gagliardi had also testified he appealed from his pulpit for volunteer labor.

"Every time a church is built an appeal is made by the pastor to his flock," Mr. Branca declared.

The whole matter appeared in the press in 1959, he said.

"Why did we have to drag this thing out again?"

He said he hoped that after the inquiry the whole issue "will have been cremated once and for good."

Mr. Branca complained that newspaper headlines during the inquiry had damaged the character of persons involved.

He suggested in future such meetings might be held in camera.

However the highways minister and all his officials had "exuded truth, honesty and integrity."

"Every credible witness that has come before you... has told you there was no preferential treatment—that there were no favors at all and no money exchanged."

He said the inquiry had no alternative but to acquit not only the minister of highways, but all his officials of any wrong doing.

Co-ordinated Research Advocated

OTTAWA (CP)—The Glasco royal commission on government organization said today the effectiveness of Canada's defence may be seriously damaged unless defence development policy is properly co-ordinated.

It recommended establishment of a defence-engineering "high command" to eliminate undue overlapping of development programs.

The need for co-ordination and direction at the highest level applied not only to defence research and development, but to all aspects of scientific research in Canada.

The president of the treasury board, a new senior cabinet post proposed in a previous volume of the Glasco report, should be designated as minister responsible for scientific policy and co-ordination of existing activities in research and development. Under his direction, a central scientific bureau would act as a science secretariat.

gains all across Canada. In Quebec, the popularity of this party is greater than ever and indicates a bright future," the statement said.

"This incident regarding the six members-elect gave us the chance to see by the reactions of the people how the Liberal party is held in contempt by the Canadian people."

Tuesday party spokesmen said they had no intention of expelling from their ranks the six Quebec MPs, nor of penalizing them.

"We have perfect unity in our party and it will be made clear when our statement is published," one said.

Mr. Thompson and Dr. Guy Marcoux, member for Quebec-Montmorency, have both criticized the six for sending their statement to the governor-general Friday without consulting party leaders. Both said they heard reports that Liberal agents were offering "handsome remuneration" to any Social Credit MP who would support the Pearson government.

This was denied by Real Caouette, Social Credit deputy leader, and by several Liberal spokesmen.

Not all those coming out of the caucus spoke of unity.

David E. Hartman of Toronto, unsuccessful candidate in Peterborough in the last election, told reporters there is "a struggle for power" in Social Credit ranks between Premier Manning and Mr. Caouette.

"You can quote me. Manning wants to dump Caouette," Mr. Hartman said.

Mr. Thompson is a puppet of Premier Manning. The party should choose a new national leader and Mr. Manning should restrict himself to provincial affairs, he added.

Mr. Caouette Tuesday repeated his criticism of Mr. Thompson for bypassing him when the national leader asked Dr. Marcoux to investigate the circumstances of the surprise statement by the six.

He said he could not do this. Then he was asked if he had recommended that the Governor-General call on Mr. Pearson to form a government.

"There is no necessity of any indication in that regard," he smiled. "Three Social Credit members have determined to give their votes to Mr. Pearson to give and provide him with a majority."

(At about the same time as Mr. Diefenbaker was referring to the three Socreds, a caucus of Quebec Socred MPs issued a statement declaring that no Socreds, including the three mentioned by Mr. Diefenbaker, were giving their vote to Mr. Pearson.)

Mr. Diefenbaker said he found Governor-General Vanier "in excellent good humor." He said he did not mean any play of words in saying that.

The prime minister also was asked what led him to establish 12 noon next Monday as the effective time for his resignation.

"I have nothing to add," he said.

His resignation, in effect, is a post-dated resignation. When he was asked by this correspondent Tuesday if he intended to submit such a resignation, he asked what the question implied. He was told that it was assumed he would be seeing the Governor-General to resign.

Such an assumption, he declared Tuesday, was not well founded. However, today he tendered a post-dated resignation.

Exile 'Paper' To Be Bared

NEW YORK (UPI)—Cuban exile sources said today the Cuban Revolutionary Council will defy Washington pressure and make public a 10,000-word Cuban "white paper" described as "embarrassing" to the Kennedy administration.

The 23-page document, a copy of which was given Washington last April 5, will be made public at an open meeting of the council in Miami Thursday night, the sources said.

Exile leaders said the Kennedy administration threatened administration threatened council President Jose Miro Cardona with immediate deportation if the document is made public, and also said no council member ever would be received in Washington again.

VICTORIA MAN'S TRIAL UNAFFECTED BY DEATH

VANCOUVER (CP)—Court officials said today that the death of a Crown witness will not affect the trial of a man charged with possessing bond coupons stolen from a St. Catharines, Ont., bank.

A spokesman said another executive of Premier Trust Company, St. Catharines, can be brought here to replace witness William Dales, 57.

Mr. Dales, manager of the firm, was swept to his death Monday over Horseshoe Falls at Niagara, Ont.

David Wilson, 32, of Victoria, is charged with possession of coupons from part of the $837,000 in bonds stolen from Premier Trust in 1959.

At Wilson's preliminary hearing, Dales identified coupons seized in Vancouver and told how his company's vault had been drilled open.

Navy Court Cites Sub Escort Chief

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP)—

A navy court has cited the skipper of a submarine escort vessel for apparent failure to advise higher authorities of the final messages from the submarine USS Thresher, lost with 129 men.

The court named—but did not charge—Lt.-Cmdr. Stanley W. Hecker, 36, of Brooklyn, N.Y., skipper of the Skylark which was accompanying the Thresher when she made her fatal test dive last Wednesday.

Vice-Admiral Bernard L. Austin, president of the court of inquiry, recalled Hecker to stand Tuesday and advised him:

"The court has concluded that your conduct as commanding officer of the USS Skylark, as revealed by evidence presented to the court, appears to be subject to inquiry."

Mayor, Chiefs Praise Police Grant

Mayor R. B. Wilson and local police chiefs Monday praised an announcement that the province has made a $5,000 grant to help pay for training of civic policemen at the Vancouver police training academy.

Vancouver Police Chief Ralph Booth said the grant would cover the $7 per day tuition charges made for policemen from Victoria, Oak Bay, Delta, Matsqui and West Vancouver scheduled to take courses at the academy.

"While metro policing is no closer, steps are being taken for more uniform training and Oak Bay Police Chief Robert Smith said the grant "cuts the bill in half" for sending a man to the mainland academy because only living expenses now have to be covered.

He said his department plans to send a man to Vancouver for a five-day course on personnel supervision.

The Victoria department will send Insp. Ray Maitland and Insp. Brooke Douglass for courses at the academy this month.

government by the northern inhabitants." The main recommendation was integration of Indian welfare with other territorial welfare services and withdrawal of Indian affairs branch agents from the region.

The growth of government scientific research from $35 million in 1945 to more than $220 million in 1961 was criticized as "fragmented" and "unbalanced." While the quality of the research was conceded to be uniformly high, the value of some of it was questioned.

The commission recommended that the president of the treasury board, whom it proposed in an earlier interim report, should be given primary responsibility for co-ordination of scientific research and development.

OPERATING BOARD

In addition to commenting on the CBC's failure to give due weight to the nation's ability to pay for the standard of broadcasting services which it provided, the commissioners also found that:

—The board of directors in fact was not responsible for CBC operations, which were dictated instead by top management. (The creation of an actual operating board employed full time and adequately remunerated, and assisted possibly by a regionally-appointed advisory committee was recommended.)

—The present corporation set-up lacks "any terminal philosophy or corporate goal" and a clear definition of its task and long-term objectives is essential.

—A single executive with clear authority over the field of programming is "a self-evident need."

—The headquarters organization where, out of a staff of more than 800, fewer than 20 are directly concerned with programming, is unbalanced.

—The engineering staff of 280 in Montreal is excessive, especially since the Columbia Broadcasting System in the United States, with almost twice the total number of employees of the CBC, has an engineering staff of only 116, which it plans to reduce.

—CBC salaries are too low in the higher echelons, with the result that there is too little scope for flexibility in the lower brackets.
